Giant explosion rocks downtown L.A.; square-block area devastated

WAREHOUSE LEVELED BY BLAST

Firemen pour water on remains of a warehouse that was destroyed by a gigantic explosion Saturday that devastated a square block area of downtown Los Angeles.

Not work of bomber, authorities say

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A powerful explosion devastated a square block area in an industrial section of Los Angeles Saturday night, leading to first reports by authorities that it might be the work of a mysterious terrorist bomber.

Mayor Thomas Bradley, who hurried to the scene to take charge, said the fire department had learned that the blast may have been the explosion of cylinders of hydrogen peroxide.

Bradley said there was "no indication" that another device had been placed by the so called "alphabet bomber" who had claimed credit for an airport bombing 11 days ago and a bomb found in a bus terminal Friday.

There were no immediate reports of any deaths in the largely deserted sections of warehouses, factories and other industrial buildings.

Four persons were reported injured and taken to hospitals in ambulances and two in private cars. A number were injured by glass blown from windows over a four block area.

Bradley said the explosion could have been the ignition of 110 cylinders of hydrogen peroxide in a truck stored in the building of the Star Trucking Co.

With the city jittery over the incidents of the past 11 days and warned there would be another explosion Sunday, the tremendous explosion heard for miles across the city led to a number of reports it could have been the work of Isaac Rasim, the man who had sent in tape recordings and made phone calls.

An officer on the police desk said at first it could have been the work of the bomber. Police, FBI and Treasury investigators converged on the scene.

A fire department spokesman reported that it was an explosive and was not natural gas.

Twenty-two engine companies responded to the alarm and brought most of the fires under control within a short period.

"It's supposed to have cleared a city block," a police desk officer said. He said it could have been Rasim's work because, "according to his statements, his next bombing would begin with the letter 'I' and the site of the explosion was an industrial area."

A witness at the nearby Coliseum, where a National Football League game was being played, described the explosion as "gigantic.

"It looked like a minature atomic bomb," he said. "We saw the explosion then, seconds later, heard it. It was spectacular."

The Coliseum is about six miles from where police located the blast.

The explosion was known to have leveled at least one building and blew out windows in other nearby structures.

At least 12 city fire units responded along with six rescue ambulances.

Saturday's explosion apparently occurred in the Star Trucking Co. warehouse. The 50 by 250 foot wood and steel building was virtually demolished. Structures on all sides were damaged and fires sprouted all around.

The blast Saturday night broke windows in a building over a four block area. The section, adjacent to the Los Angeles River, is occupied mostly by warehouses, factories and other industrial buildings. Except for security personnel, there were few people working in the area at the time.

Police cordoned off the blast scene as a huge crowd gathered.

The building most damaged appeared to be a garage and trucking company. Smoke billowed into the sky as fire alarms resounded.

The FBI and Treasury Department joined police and firemen at the scene.

Earlier Saturday, the Herald Examiner received a telephone call, purportedly from Rasim, saying he had postponed a plan to detonate a bomb on Sunday, assistant city editor Leo Batt said.

INJURED IN BOMB EXPLOSION

Medical personnel and firemen give first aid to victim of giant explosion which rocked an industrial area of Los Angeles late Saturday night. There were no deaths; several persons were injured.

Rasim: 'he's not just a mad bomber'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Little is known about Isaac Rasim, except that he has a thick accent, definite views on alien laws and has claimed responsibility for planting two bombs, one of which killed three persons and injured 35 at Los Angeles International Airport.

"He's not just a mad bomber," said Lt. Pete Hagan, spokesman for the Los Angeles police department. "He has some intelligence and he knows what he wants."

Police say they are learning more and more about Rasim with every new tape recording and telephone call from him, but that it is not yet enough.

He has been labeled the "alphabet bomber" because he has vowed to "spell out in blood across America" the lettered sequence of the group he claims to represent, Aliens of America.

Rasim has been described as having a thick Middle Eastern accent, but police said linguistics experts believe it is Russian or Slavic, perhaps Hungarian or Lithuanian.

His demands have been a hodge podge, mostly centering on his belief that U.S. immigration and naturalization laws are unconstitutional and that there should be more of a separation between church and state.

One of his specific demands is that the Los Angeles police department bring murder charges against two officers — now retired —who killed two Mexican nationals during a raid four years ago. The police department admitted the raid was a mistake, but the officers were cleared of any wrongdoing.

"Rasim" also has demanded that U.S. Immigration and Naturalization laws be overturned, that Congress repeal "all sex law" and make a more specific separation of church and state.

Girl, 6, burned; incident probed

A six-year-old Chino girl was badly burned Saturday morning and taken to Loma Linda University Hospital.

Terry Woods was reported in critical condition at the hospital Saturday night. She received her burns at about 10 a.m. near Park Place and 10th Street in Chino.

Chino Police refused to give information about the incident Saturday, but it was reported that the circumstances of the child's burning were under investigation.

Body of man found with head blown off; ruled a suicide

The body of a 22-year-old man, with his head partially blown off, was found by sheriff's deputies Satuday in a remote canyon area north of Altadena.

The victim, who committed suicide according to deputies, was identified as Michael Laurie of Arcadia.

Altadena and San Dimas deputies conducted a search of the Rubio Canyon area after finding what proved to be the victim's car on Pinecrest Street in Altadena several days ago.

The search began about 7:30 a.m. Saturday and the body was discovered at 2 p.m. Position of the body, and the high-powered rifle found nearby led deputies to declare it a suicide.

Laurie had been reported missing by his family on July 18.

Still in running for vice president

Rockefeller cleared—attempt to smear him

By RICHARD LERNER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford not only still considers Nelson A. Rockefeller a vice presidential possibility but believes there was a deliberate attempt to discredit the former New York governor with anonymous allegations, the White House said Saturday.

Presidential Press Secretary Jerry terHorst reported Ford's position and the possible involvement of an extremist organization after announcing that the office of Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski had concluded from an investigation there was no truth to allegations that Rockefeller had provided money to help disrupt the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

"President Ford has advised me that former Gov. Rockefeller has been and remains under consideration for the vice presidential nomination," terHorst said.

The allegations came last Sunday from an anonymous informer who claimed that evidence documenting Rockefeller's involvement in the 1972 "dirty tricks" was contained in missing records which once were in the custody of convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr.

The informer was said to have told Philip Buchen, former Ford law partner who has since been named White House counsel, that copies of the Hunt papers could be found in safe deposit boxes in a bank vault.

When advised, Ford ordered all the available information given to Jaworksi's office. Members of the prosecutor's staff said later they had found nothing in the specified location and considered the investigation closed.

The incident and Ford's reaction to it prompted speculation that Rockefeller no longer was in the running to fill the vacant vice presidency. But terHorst told reporters at midafternoon that Rockefeller remained in contention, and added:

"The President regards the inaccurate information given to Mr. Buchen on Sunday Aug. 11 as a deplorable example of the lengths to which certain persons will go to discredit Mr. Rockefeller and thereby attempt to remove him from consideration."

Under questioning, terHorst said, "I think this is an attempt by an extremist group to discredit Governor Rockefeller."

TerHorst would not elaborate, but said his judgment was "based on reasonable assumptions" that the incident apparently represented an effort by "extremists who wished for reasons of their own" to lead Ford to pick someone other than Rockefeller.

Another White House official, who declined to be identified, said he was told that Rockefeller was the target of "right wing extremists." This official said he could not be more specific, but said all the information had been made available to Jaworski's office and that an investigation is possible.

TerHorst said the White House is not conducting an investigation of its own, but that Ford is eager to find out all he can about the apparent ruse.

"There is no clear indication that those responsible were connected in any way with one of the other men said to be under consideration for vice president, and the real identity of the tipster is still unknown," terHorst said.

The informer who contacted Buchen did so first by telephone, identifying himself as a "Mr. Long" of Washington. Later that day, the man met with Buchen in the Executive Office Building next door to the White House.

Buchen later presented all of the charges to Ford, who ordered that they be turned over to the special prosecutor.

TerHorst rejected a reporter's suggestion that the White House had been "duped," maintaining that the important thing was to clear up the situation before Ford selected the vice presidential nominee.

He said that as far as he knew, neither Ford nor any other White House official had talked to Rockefeller about the matter.

Two Yablonski killers freed for confessing

WASHINGTON, Pa. (UPI) — Two admitted murderers were given probation and new identities Saturday in return for confessions that ultimately led to the conviction of former United Mine Workers president W.A. "Tony" Boyle for the 1969 Yablonski slayings.

Another admitted Yablonski assassin had his murder charges dismissed by President Judge Charles G. Sweet of Washington County Court.

Silous Huddleston, 65, and his daughter, Annette Gilly, 34, were sentenced to two years imprisonment for conspiracy and 4 ½ years for the murder of Yablonski. Both sentences were made retroactive to 1970 when they were taken into custody.

In addition, Huddleston and Mrs. Gilly were each placed on 10 years probation for the murders of Yablonski's wife and daughter. Sweet also said the pair would be taken "quite away from Pennsylvania and given new identities" to protect them from possible harassment and reprisals for their testimony against Boyle.

The judge also dropped state murder charges against William J. Turnblazer, former UMW District 19 president, whose confession and testimony led directly to Boyle's conviction last April.

Joseph A. "Jock" Yablonski, his wife and daughter were assassinated while they slept in their Clarksville, Pa. home on New Year's Eve, 1969. The murders came three weeks after a bitter UMW election in which Yablonski unsuccessfully attempted to unseat Boyle.

Boyle, 72, is appealing his life prison term on state murder charges. In the meantime, he is serving a three-year federal term for diverting union funds to political campaigns.

Sweet said Huddleston and Gilly would be transported from Pennsylvania to some other location in about a month. Court sources said the father and daughter would probably alter their physical appearances, perhaps by changing the color of their hair, and assume new names.

Mrs. Gilly's husband, Paul, and Aubran Martin were convicted of actually killing the Yablonskis. Another Cleveland man, Claude Vealey, confessed to also taking part in the slayings.

Turnblazer, of Middlesboro, Ky., is currently serving a maximum 15-year federal term in connection with the Yablonski case.

The confessions of Huddleston and Mrs. Gilly in 1972 led to the convictions of two former UMW officials, William J. Prater, a union organizer from Huddleston's home of LaFollette, Tenn., and Albert E. Pass, District 19 secretary-treasurer.

THEY'LL HAVE NEW IDENTITIES

Silous Huddleston and his daughter, Mrs. Annette Cilly leave Washington County Courthouse after being placed on 10 years probation. The two acted as go-betweens in the contract murder of United Mine Workers leader Joseph A. Yablonski, his wife and daughter on New Years Eve in 1969.

Hussein renews offer of peace talks with Israel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — King Hussein of Jordan renewed his offer Saturday to negotiate military disengagement with Israel and said he would welcome a personal assist from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger through "shuttle diplomacy."

In an interview, the Jordanian monarch said Kissinger's current consulations here with Israeli and Arab envoys have not yet determined whether the next step in the search for a lasting Middle East peace should be Israeli-Jordanian negotiations or talks on further military disengagement between Israel and Egypt across the Sinai peninsula.

Hussein said he did not look for an early resumption of the Geneva conference on the Mideast.

Kissinger is to meet in the coming week with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam.

"I believe we will have to accept a period of time to pass to give the secretary of state a chance in light of the changes which have occurred," Hussein said in obvious reference to Richard M. Nixon's resignation. He insisted, though, that Nixon's departure had not destabilized the Middle East or lessened the U.S. effort to promote peace.

Referring to the possibility of Kissinger "shuttle diplmacy" between Amman and Jerusalem, the diminutive monarch said: "If Jordan is the country to be involved, we would like it very much."

"It is too early to see exactly how this would develop. The next step is still being developed."

Hussein, the guest Friday night at a champagne and steak dinner at the White House, is the first foreign chief of state to visit here since President Ford was inaugurated Aug. 9.

Still deadlocked on key issue

Demo Party regulars gain concessions from reformers

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Democratic Party regulars Saturday won three controversial points from "new politics" reformers, but remained deadlocked on the key issue of how actively the party will encourage participation by minorities, youth and women.

The 167-member Party Commission, working on a party constitution for submission during the Democratic miniconvention in Kansas City Dec. 6-8, recessed for the night without resolving the issue. The contingent of 16 blacks has threatened to walk out over it.

At issue was an effort by an old-time regular faction to change a part of the charter which would require national, state and local Democratic units to aggressively seek participation by minorities, young people and women in "all party affairs."

The regulars wanted to restrict this affirmative action requirement to the national convention delegate selection process, complaining that the broader provision now in the draft charter would cause an undue hardship on state and local organizations.

But the reformers, spearheaded by the blacks, said they had already agreed to give up the controversial 1972 quota system to insure their participation, and could not give way further.

Through compromise, the regulars won approval of a provision which would permit, but not require, the party to hold policy conferences every four years between presidential elections and permit, but not require, the party's National Committee to establish a judicial council to settle internal affairs.

The regulars also prevailed on a plan that would permit the party's presidential nominee to chose his own national committee chairman after the convention over a reform plan that would give national chairmen four-year terms starting after presidential elections.

At stake in the question of participation, beyond fine points of party law, was the delicate truce achieved during the past two years by National Chairman Robert Strauss.

Charter Commission Chairman Terry Sanford warned that now, with a popular new Republican president in the White House, the Democrats could not afford a renewal of the bitter squabbling of 1972.

The reform contingent had been expected to bow to Strauss on the frequency of party policy conferences and the judicial council question, but did not want to eliminate other reforms written by the faction that came into prominence with the 1972 candidacy of Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D.

Woman pounds lion with shoe to rescue child

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — A 3-year-old boy was pulled from the jaws of a lioness at a zoo recently after a young woman beat the enraged animal on the head with her tennis shoe.

Brandon Gates was taken to a hospital where his condition was described as good. A spokesman said he was under treatment for lion bites on his knee and scratches on his stomach.

Police said Brandon climbed a wire-mesh safety fence at the Happy Hollow Park and Baby Zoo and began rattling the bars on the lion cages.

The 180-pound lioness became angry, struck out a paw, pulled the boy up to the cage, and fastened her jaws around his knee.

Myra Woolverton, 24, saw Brandon's mother and two other women struggling to save the boy.

"I thought, 'That lion isn't going to let go of that boy,' so I jumped over the fence, took off my shoe and started pounding the lion on the head through the bars until he let go," she said.

85-year-old man struck by auto

An 85-year-old Ontario man was struck and critically injuried by an automobile as he crossed "G" Street in that city Saturday afternoon.

Warren DeJean of 330 El Morado Court, Ontario, reportedly stepped from behind a tree into the path of a car driven by Nancy May Worsham of 513 E. "D" St., Ontario. The accident occurred at 1:15 p.m. Saturday.

DeJean was rushed to Ontario Community Hospital, where he was listed in extremely critical condition Saturday night.

Greek Cypriots vow to fight to end

Turks face guerrilla war

By JOHN RIGOS

ATHENS (UPI) — The Turkish troops that romped across Cyprus almost at will, slicing off a 1,200-square-mile chunk of the island in 60 hours of fighting that ended Friday, may find that their toughest battle is yet ahead.

Instead of the autonomous Turkish Cypriot zone within a federated Cypriot government which they hope to create, they may find themselves with another Vietnam.

Greek military experts predict more fighting on Cyprus in two phases: first, the victorious Turks are expected to mop up several Greek Cypriot units cut off in the northern part of Cyprus. Then, guerrilla warfare —a specialty of Greek Cypriots since the 1950's when they successfully fought the British for independence.

The outnumbered and outgunned Greek Cypriots stood no chance against the invading Turks. Their arsenal of World War II rifles, machine guns and aging armored cars was no match against the Turkish F4 Phantom jets and modern artillery.

But now that the field battles are over, the Greek Cypriots can begin fighting a war their way.

"The Turks have inherited the first European Vietnam and this is only a beginning," said Loizos Christodoulides, a retired Greek general who served in Cyprus.

He said the mountains of northern Cyprus now in Turkish hands lend themselves to guerrila war and Greek Cypriots wouldn't need many men to wage it successfully.

"Gen. (George) Grivas kept about 40,000 British troops and police on their toes for five years with less than 300 men," Christodoulides said.

Grivas, the late Greek guerrilla leader who fought the British, said in his memoirs that he started with a handful of men and never had more than 53 guerrillas in the mountains and 220 in the towns.

According to reports from Cyprus, Grivas' guerrilla organization EOKA-B has more than 1,000 members, at least 200 of them roaming the mountains.

They could be joined by some Greek Cypriot national guardsmen, all highly trained and familiar with the terrain, who want to continue the struggle.

All EOKA leaders have survived the latest fighting, including Maj. George Karoussos, Grivas' deputy since 1971. Karoussos was ordered back home by the Greek militry junta after Grivas' death at age 75 in January, but sources in Nicosia said he returned to Cyprus when the junta fell last month.

Another guerrilla specialist now fighting in Cyprus is Col. Dimitrios Kaloyannis.

The humiliation and the sense of deprivation that goes with defeat is an important psychological factor. Greek Cypriots never got along with the Turks in the past. Now they will hate them, much like Palestinians hate Israelis.

"There is nothing left to us but guerrilla warfare," said Evripides Akritas, Athens correspondent of the Nicosia daily Filetheros. "We have lost everything. Over 100,000 people have lost their property and are refugees. We will fight to the bitter end, even if it takes centuries."

Two win medals at police olympics

Two officers of the Ontario Police Department won bronze medals at the Police Olympics in Sacramento earlier this month.

Officer Wayne Hurte won a bronze medal in archery, and Officer Irving Busse won one in the 440-yard dash.

The Police Olympics were held in Sacramento for policemen in California and adjacent states.

First of stranded tourists back home

LONDON (UPI) — The first of 40,000 tourists stranded by the collapse of the Court Line, Britain's second largest travel firm, returned home Saturday on money taken out of the company's insurance bond.

Another 100,000 would-be travelers —many paid more than $480 in advance —were stranded at home with little prospect of getting their money back.

Opposition politicians blamed the Labor government and called for an independent inquiry into the bankruptcy which also put 3,000 people out of a job.

Six flights of VC10s and Boeing 707s brought home tourists from Malaga, Barcelona, Palma and Alicante, their holiday in the Spanish sun cut short by the sudden announcement Thursday that Court Line had gone into liquidation.

Rupert Nicholson, the appointed liquidator, said most of the $7.2 million insurance bond put up by the company would be used up in getting stranded tourists home.

"It is my personal opinion that there will be little left out of the insurance bond after bringing people home and paying any outstanding hotel bills," Nicholson said.

Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe said Industry Secretary Anthony Wedgewood Benn had been "blindly ignorant" of Court's impending insolvency. The Labor government nationalized Court Line's profitable shipping subsidiaries last month.

A delegation of Carribbean heads of states flew to London to discuss the future of Leeward Islands Air Transport which is the sole carrier servicing St. Vincent, Dominica, Montserrat and other islands.

The Court Line owned the regional airline, but the Caribbean governments had been seeking to take it over. The heads of state said they would try to make arrangements for interim management until the takeover can be completed in talks with British government officials and other interested parties.

Doctor who never billed his patients almost loses home

PORTLAND, Maine (UPI) — A doctor who cared more for his patients than his pocket will be able to keep his home here after all.

Dr. Leo J. McDermott, 66, is now chief of rehabilitation services at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Togus. But before that, he practiced orthopedics in the Portland area for many years. And he never sent a patient a bill.

"I'm very much of the old school," he said. "I'm more of a medical man than a businessman and I always have been."

But McDermott's relaxed attitude about money nearly cost him the family home in Portland. The city told him several weeks ago it would take legal action if he didn't pay more than $14,000 in back taxes.

Dr. McDermott placed an ad in a Portland newspaper, appealing to past patients to come up with some payment for his services. At the time he estimated that more than 1,000 patients owed him more than $150,000.

The ad brought in more than $6,000, and Dr. McDermott said he had borrowed the rest of the money from the hospital credit union.

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — The 37th running of the All-American Soap Box Derby ended in a photo finish Saturday after three of the 99 entrants were disqualified when officials ruled they had not built and designed their cars themselves.

Eleven-year-old Curtis Yarborough of Elk Grove, Calif. guided his sleek golden racer down the 954-foot hill in 27.15 seconds, barely ahead of Mark Raber of New Philadelphia, Ohio, and Edward Myers of Conshohocken, Pa.

Three boys were disqualified Friday night after they were unable to duplicate the workmanship that went into their cars —Richard Pierce of Moira, N.Y., Don Puckett of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Jay Agee of Little Rock, Ark.

In all, 23 of the contestants took tests to prove to officials that they had built and designed their own cars.

The tests were a direct outgrowth of last year's derby scandal, when it was discovered that the winning boy's uncle helped design his car.

Robert Lange Sr. admitted helping his nephew, 14-year-old James Gronen of Boulder, Colo., conceal an electromagnet in the nose of his car and a battery in the tail. A hidden switch triggered the magnet, giving the car an extra tug off the starting line.

Gronen's victory was invalidated and Bret Yarborough, who finished second, was declared the winner. Bret is the brother of saturday's winner, Curtis Yarborough.

Kimberly Etchison of Anderson, Ind., the only girl to place in the top nine finishers, placed fourth after winning the semifinals with a close decision over Debra Meade of Muncie, Ind., and Vickie McKinney of Ventura, Calif.

Yarborough received a $3,000 scholarship for his victory.

Raber, 12, won a $2,000 grant for second place, and Mayers, 12, was awarded a $1,000 scholarship for third place.

Other finishers were: fifth, Gregory Mock of Zanesville, Ohio; sixth, Layne Bryan of Hamilton, Ohio; seventh, Barry Cherney of Berea, Ohio; eighth, Kenneth Stead of Morrisville, Pa.; and ninth, Todd Shroyer of Troy, Ohio.

War on Cyprus

Turks win militarily what they couldn't peacefully

By United Press International

Cyprus, a perennial pawn in the power play of dominant Mediterranean civilizations, fell prey to devastating modern warfare July 20 when 40,000 well armed Turkish troops started invading the island.

The fighting culminated this week when the Turkish invaders, in a bold offensive across the island, captured the northern third of the country, thus establishing by force what they had failed to achieve in decades of negotiations.

A final cease-fire was not accepted and obeyed until 6 p.m. Friday —when Turkey firmly controlled the area where it wants to set up an autonomous zone for the island's Turkish minority.

But it remains to be seen whether that fait accompli will ever be accepted by the ethnic Greek majority on the island, the Greek government in Athens or the present-day Mediterranean powers including the United States and the Soviet Union.

Since the fall of Troy to the Greeks in 1184 B.C., Cyprus had been ruled alternately by Greeks, Phoenicians, Assyrians, Egyptians, Persians, Romans, Byzantines, Moslems, Crusaders, Venetians, Turks and Britons.

The turbulent history left the island with a legacy of festering nationalism between its present population of 560,000 Greeks and 40,000 Turks. Sporadic violence erupted between the communities after Britain made Cyprus independent in 1960 under a Greek Cypriot president and a Turkish Cypriot vice president.

Makarios overthrown

The latest crisis exploded July 15 when Greek-led national guard troops overthrew President Makarios and drove the bearded archbishop, who barely escaped with his life from the bombardment of his presidential palace, into exile.

Turkey demanded a return to the old government when the armed forces replaced Makarios with Nikos Sampson, a former guerrilla gunman backing "enosis" —union of Cyprus with Greece.

The United States sent a top diplomatic troubleshooter, Undersecretary of State Joseph J. Sisco, shuttling between Athens and the Turkish capital of Ankara during the week that followed to try to avert war between the two partners in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

But on Saturday, July 20, a 6,000-man Turkish task force invaded Cyprus before dawn, seizing a wide beachhead on the island's northern coast and pushing inland toward Nicosia.

The invasion force clashed at first with the 10,000-man Cypriot national guard commanded by Greek officers, but the fighting soon touched off battles between Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot vigilantes.

The United Nations ordered a cease-fire July 22 after a dramatic Security Council appeal for restoration by the ousted Makarios.

But the truce was widely ignored as Turkey continued to build up its invasion force and reports of atrocities of rape and murder by Turkish soldiers trickled in from refugees who fled the Turkish zone to the embattled capital of Nicosia.

In Ankara, Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit told a news conference July 23 that Turkish troops were on the island to stay.

Greek government falls

Meanwhile in Athens, the ruling Greek military junta was toppled by a spreading wave of discontent over its inability to affect the Cyprus crisis and other, domestic issues.

The new civilian government of Constantine Karamanlis agreed to meet with representatives from Turkey and Britain —the other two guarantors of the 1960 Cyprus independence treaty —in Geneva July 25 in an attempt to find a diplomatic solution to the crisis.

Those talks, after several all-night sessions of arduous negotiations which threatened to break off several times, resulted on July 30 in a new, in-place cease-fire, also widely ignored.

While British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan tried to keep the negotiations going, Greek Foreign Minister George Mavros complained that he had been presented with a list of "non-negotiable" demands by his Turkish colleague Turan Gunes.

As part of the in-place ceasefire accord, Greece and Turkey also agreed to meet again in Geneva starting Aug. 8 along with Cypriot representatives to work out the political future of the strife-torn island.

In the meantime, the firebrand Sampson was replaced as president of Cyprus by Glafkos Clerides, another ethnic Greek who would have become president anyway in the absence of Makarios by virtue of his post as president of the Cypriot parliament. The move appeared to give the new regime the international respectability it lacked under Sampson.

Turkish aims become clear

At the second Geneva session on the island's political future, the Turkish aims became clear. While denying it was seeking a partition, leaders of Cyprus's Turkish minority called for dividing the island into two autonomous regions.

They also demanded the Greek Cypriots vacate Turkish enclaves on the island. On Aug. 12, perhaps in an effort to meet the demands halfway, Greek-led troops on Cyprus freed the first of thousands of Turkish prisoners of war and began pulling out from some occupied minority enclaves.

But Greek Cypriot officials vigorously opposed any form of partition and at the same time, Greece beefed up troops outside Athens in a test of its ability to meet any new Turkish moves on Cyprus.

Faced with the imminent collapse of the Geneva talks, British mediators on Tuesday, Aug. 13, proposed a 48-hour cooling-off period. But Turkey didn't wait, as it said later, because it was convinced its demands would never be accepted.

Car Pools can use bus lanes

The California Department of Transportation announced Friday that beginning Monday morning car pools with a special permit will be allowed to use the bus-way lanes on the San Bernardino Freeway.

The action was taken due to the continuing strike against the Rapid Transit District that has halted bus traffic. Car pools will be allowed to use the bus lanes only until the strike is settled.

In order to use the bus lanes, a car must have at least three occupants, including tse driver, and a special permit.

Use of the westbound busway will be allowed each weekday morning from 6 a.m. to 9 a.m., holidays and weekends not included. Entrance to the lane will be exclusively from the far left (fast lane) of the freeway just west of Santa Anita Avenue, or via the Del Mar Avenue westbound bus ramp.

The eastbound bus lane will be open to car pools on weekdays from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. Entrance to the busway lane will be limited to the Mission Road eastbound bus ramp or from the left lane of San Bernardino Freeway just west of the Long Beach Freeway interchange.

Officials warn that the busway is one lane only, and that no passing is permitted, nor crossing onto the rugular freeway lanes except at designated points. Greyhound buses and others will continue to operate on the busway.

Permits to use the bus lane may be secured at the following locations:

El Monte Shopping Center, Peck Road and Valley Boulevard, today from 10 to 5 p.m., and on Monday and Tuesday from 5:45 to 9 a.m.

Crawford's Market at New Avenue and Valley boulevard, same hours.

Dept. of Transportation main office at 120 S. Spring St., Los Angeles, daily starting Monday from 7:30 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

County starts mail-order diagnosis of garden pests

Los Angeles County property owners can now receive assistance in identifying bothersome pests that dwell in their gardens and around their homes.

The "mail-in" program, initiated by the county agricultural commissioner's office, will enable homeowners to learn the name of the pest he finds causing damage to his home, so that he will be able to get proper control. If an insect is beneficial to a homeowners garden and need not be controlled, the homeowner will also be made aware of this.

Homeowners interested in taking advantage of this program may pick up identification slips at plant nurseries throughout the county. Insects submitted, according to the commissioner's office, must first be killed and then wrapped in tissue paper and placed in a pill bottle or similar plastic container for mailing. To assure the specimens remain in good condition the best way to kill the insects is to drop them into rubbing alcohol, officials said.

Specimens, along with the identification slip, should be sent to the Los Angeles County Agricultural Commissioner, 155 W. Washington Blvd., Los Angeles 900015.

RESIDENTS MARCH

Residents of the Cinnamon Ridge tract in southwest Chino walk a picket line in front of the tract's model home. Residents are angry over leaky roofs and their inability to get satisfactory repair work from the builders, Kaufman and Broad. About a dozen homeowner's took part in the protest.

VA will have MSAC office to make sure vets get paid

The Veteran Administration is assigning two full-time representatives to Mt. San Antonio College to help former servicemen get their educational allotments on time this year.

James Simpson, vice president in charge of business affairs, said the college is providing an office for the two representatives for $75 a month "so what happened last year won't be repeated this year."

Scores of veterans had to drop out of MSAC in 1973 because their allotment checks were as much as four months late.

The VA at first denied the delays, then blamed the veterans for misfilings, and finally called it all a computer error. Eventually the VA accepted responsiblity and its employes were ordered to work over the Thanksgiving weekend to process the checks that were due at the beginning of the term.

Meanwhile, the student association, faculty and community leaders attempted to help the distressed veterans by cash contributions to a loan fund.

There were 3,000 veterans at MSAC last year. Simpson said the enrollment this year is expected to be higher.

"We feel this will be an excellent service for our veterans," he said. "It will certainly cut the red tape."

Huey Newton jailed, accused of pistol whipping tailor

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — Huey P. Newton, a cofounder of the Black Panther organization, was arrested Saturday on a charge of assault with deadly weapon after the pistol whipping of a tailor in Newton's posh apartment.

At the time of his arrest police filed an additional charge of assault with a deadly weapon involving a 17-year-old girl who was shot in the head on an Oakland street Aug. 6.

Newton was surrendered to Oakland police by his attorney, Charles R. Garry, and bail was set at $42,000.

Police said Preston Callins, 52, a tailor, visited Newton's penthouse Friday to fit him with new clothes. According to investigators, an argument developed and Callins was badly beaten.

With a search warrant police visited the apartment, and Homicide Lt. Bill Clark said, "There was lots of blood all over the place." Clark said other evidence was found in the apartment which corroborated Callins' story.

Callins suffered skull fractures and was hospitalized in serious but stable condition.

Clark said Newton was not arrested earlier in the Aug. 6 shooting of the girl because, "We knew he would be around and we wanted additional evidence." Newton was free on $5,000 bail on a charge of assaulting a police officer last month in a local nightclub.

The girl, who was unidentified, is being treated in a hospital for her head wound and is listed in very serious condition, police said.

Clark said the motive in the case of the girl was "a mystery." He said Newton got out of a car to talk to her on a street corner, became angry and shot her.

Newton, 31, has lived in a $650-a-month apartment overlooking Lake Merritt since his release from prison in 1971. Usually accompanied by a 6-foot-8 bodyguard, he was frequently seen in Oakland night clubs.

He has visited Peking and has urged the Black Panthers to put away their guns and work for change within the conventional political system. His Black Panther party cofounder, Bobby Seale, is actively running for mayor of Oakland and is backing a slate of candidates for the city council.

Newton served 22 months in prison for the 1967 slaying of a policeman, but the conviction was reversed. The charge was dropped after two subsequent trials in which the juries disagreed on a verdict.

Blaze damages duplex; fireman suffers injury

A bedroom fire swept through a Pomona duplex early Saturday sending one fireman to the hospital and causing over $1,000 damage to the building.

Fireman Chris Rowe of Pomona strained his knee while battling the blaze and was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital, where he was treated and released.

The fire gutted the residence of Marnie Stephenson, 645 Fillmore St., and caused $100 damage to the contents of the duplex. She was not at home at the time of the fire. Firemen responded to a call by a neighbor.

The blaze is still under investigation. It may have been started because of an elecctrical short in a draw cord, said firemen.

Calf nursery for city gets county okay

Establishment of a calf nursery near Chino has received approval of the the San Bernardino County Planning Commission.

Norma Jean Lee and Barbar Miller plan to raise calves on a five-acre parcel located on the north side of Schaefer Avenue, west of Cucamonga Avenue. The land is zoned for agriculture use. The property presently has a house, small barn and 19 corrals. The number of calves to be allowed will be decided by the county's health department, officials said.

The applicants plan to raise calves from one day old to three months.

In another matter Thursday, planners approved site and development plans submitted by Modrex Corp. to construct an assembly plant on four acres on the east side of Vineyard Avenue, south of Eighth Street in Cucamonga.

The plant will be used to assemble portable office structures. The firm plans to construct an 18,000-square-foot building with adjoining office. The property is presently zoned for manufacturing use.

Boy, 13, jailed for bomb threat calls to school

A 13-year-old Ontario boy was taken into custody by police Friday after making three bomb threat calls to Mariposa School in Ontario.

School officials said that classes had to be interrupted following each bomb hoax. Students and school personnel evacuated the buildings while policemen and firemen searched the grounds.

Police said that they were able to determine who the caller was and took him into custody at his home.

It has not been determined whether charges will be filed against the youth in juvenile court.

Protest housing construction

Tract residents take to picket line

By ED PRATHER
P-B Staff Writer

Angry residents, complaining of "shoddy construction" and "outright lies" by the firm of Kaufman and Board, formed a picket line outside the model home of the Cinnamon Ridge housing tract Saturday in the southwest Chino area.

A spokesman for Kaufman and Board claimed that the residents complaints were not valid.

More than a dozen residents of the tract, which consists of about 600 homes in the $20,000 to $30,000 price range, took part in the protest and claimed that more than 90 per cent of all the residents in the tract had complaints about their homes.

"The homes are simply not built right," said George Jumper, 15357 Pine Lane, a resident of the tract since January of 1973.

One of the central complaints is the poor conditions of homes with tile roofs. Residents say that the tiles are incorrectly set so that they do not overlap, which causes the roof to leak whenever it rains.

Holes in the roof are clearly visible when examined from underneath. Broken tiles are also common.

In addition, complained residents, high winds cause tiles to fall off the roof completely.

"When you pay for a tile roof, you expect it to last virtually forever. The tiles themselves are good quality, but they have been set in place so poorly that I doubt my roof will last five years," said Jumper.

Residents say that during winter rains the water leaks through the roof and insulation and then down into the walls, leaving stains. One resident walking the picket line displayed a photograph showing water dripping from an electrical outlet in his living room.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Pierce, residents of the tract since 1971, said that the problems became apparent immediately after they bought their home.

Since that time, they reported using every means available trying to have the problems corrected, but have met only with frustration and repeated delays by the builder.

"They listen to our complaints, but there is never any real response," said Mrs. Pierce.

During the first year, she said, the company did send out repairmen, but the problems with the roofs cannot be alleviated with patchwork.

"The only thing that can be done is to put new roofs on the houses," she continued. Residents estimate that the cost would be from $750 to $1,500 per home.

Other complaints, residents said, deal with faulty kitchen equipment, water heaters and general workmanship.

Pierce explained that the residents have retained legal counsel and plan to take the builder to court if necessary.

"We feel that it is obvious that Kaufman and Broad have no intention of fulfilling their obligation to us. The five-year guarantee they gave us isn't worth the paper it's printed on," he said.

James Hintz, president of the Southern California Division of Kaufman and Broad, said from his Irvine office Saturday that problems with the tract stem only from an extremely strong Santa Ana wind condition last year.

"There was no history of any roof trouble before that. We went out and replaced tiles blown off by the wind. We shouldn't have even done that. They should go to their insurance companies for repair work," he said.

Part of the trouble, he continued, is that many residents get out and walk on the tile roofs, putting up T.V. antennas or inspecting the roof itself.

"You just can't walk on these roofs without causing damage," he said.

Masked man with crippled arm robs valley business

A man with a crippled right arm, wearing a stocking mask, robbed a Pomona business of $350 in cash, checks and gift certificates early Saturday, police said.

The robber, who appeared at Pier I Imports, 2090 N. Garey Ave., at 9:15 a.m., either hid in the store overnight or walked in after the store opened in the morning, officers therorized.

The suspect showed a small caliber weapon to manager John Dung, and forced him to open a safe. Included in the money taken by the robber was a $10 counterfiet bill, several checks signed "Robert Stevenson", and five packs of gift certificates.

Officers said the suspect put the items in three large bags, two of them from Pier I Imports, one from Bank of America. He allegedly forced the manager to lie on the floor as he fled the establishment.

Police further described the suspect as a male causcasian in his 30's about six feet tall with brown hair, and wearing a blue shirt and white pants.

According to police, Clark was driving his motorcycle east on San Bernardino Road when he hit a car driven by Eleuterio Meding, 75, of La Puente.

Meding, police said, was attempting to turn left onto San Bernardino Road from Balboa Street.

Ideas for dam to be aired

Prado expansion: yes or no...?

Should the Prado Dam and reservoir near Chino be enlarged to provide better flood control?

This will be discussed in a public meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the San Bernardino Convention Center, 303 N. E St., San Bernardino.

County Supervisor Robert Townsend of Chino and Col. John Foley, district engineer for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, have been discussing the matter in previous meetings.

Because of the flood damage potential to Orange County, located downstream from the dam, officials believe an enlarged flood control reservior is needed to handle regular flood waters to capacities that channels can accommodate.

Enlargement of the Prado reservior, however, would require rights-of-way of property now used for dairies and field crops. Under an original proposal to enlarge Prado Dam, officials estimated 6,000 acres in the Chino and Corona areas would be needed.

Townsend, concerned over the impact on the diary and agriculture interests, has supported an alternate proposal to create a second dam at Mentone which would result in reduced acreage for the Prado reservior.

By having a second dam upstream, this would also provide flood protection all along the Santa Ana River from the San Bernardino mountains to the Pacific Ocean.

And with a combined Prado-Mentone dam proposal, this could offer recreational and conservation benefits to the upper Santa Ana Basin area, he reported.

At Wednesday's session, Col. Foley is expected to discuss various proposals the Corps of Engineers has investigated since 1965. His office is expected to file recommendations to higher authorities in San Francisco and Washington, D.C., within the next three months.

Officials estimated the proposal projects of enlarging the Prado Dam, developing the Mentone Dam, and making channel modifications in Orange County could exceed $500 million.

This would be among the largest flood control projects ever undertaken in the United States. Because of time needed to process such a project, construction wouldn't start for five to 10 years, they added.

Turks win . . .

Turkey overran much of eastern Cyprus Aug. 14 with massive air, artillery and tank attacks. The United Nations announced yet another ceasefire had been agreed to between Greek Cypriot and Turkish forces in the capital of Nicosia, but firing continued for an hour after it went into effect.

The Turkish forces surrounded U.N. troops holding the Nicosia airport and leveled much of the industrial area of Nicosia itself with heavy bombing attacks.

Elsewhere, the Turkish troops pushed west to Lefka and east to Famagusta along a 65-mile front which the Turks call the "Attila Line" after the infamous Attila the Hun who conquered large parts of Europe in the 5th century A.D. Although Attila was never on Cyprus, he is a hero in Turkish history because both Huns and Turks trace their ancestry to the Mongolian race.

Clerides protested to the U.N. over the Turkish offensive, said the Turks were extending the area under the control and called on the Security Council to intervene.

Ecevit said he believed the attacks would not bring a Turco-Greek war. His calculations proved correct when Karamanlis went on national television in Greece on Thursday to tell his nation it was not feasible for Greece to oppose the Turks militarily. Cyprus was 300 miles from the nearest Greek island and the well-entrenched Turkish force was too difficult to dislodge, Karamanlis said.

Bitter Week

For the Greek Cypriots it was a bitter week. More than a fifth of them are now refugees from their home villages. They sit crowded in villages in the Troodos mountains and in villages in the far south. Others are camped under trees in the British army base of Dhekelia, near Lanarca.

Turkish forces rolled up most of the northeastern third of Cyprus Aug. 15 along the "Attila line" and the Turkish Cypriot radio claimed the Greek Cypriot defenders of the island's only deepsea port of Famagusta had surrendered.

A U.N. spokesman, however, denied the claim. UPI correspondent Michael Keats reported fighting in the streets of Famagusta but the city fell the following day, Thursday.

American-built F4 Phantom jets of the Turkish air force pounded Greek Cypriot positions in the Famagusta area and bombed near the northern port of Lefka, Keats reported. Keats said the jets reduced Famagusta's "Golden Mile" of resort hotels to flaming rubble. Mortar and machine gun fire was still rattled the capital Nicosia.

Greece, powerless to intervene militarily against the Turks and furious over what Greeks widely considered a letdown by the United States, threatened to expel the 4,000 U.S. troops based in Greece, according to a high official in Athens.

In Turkey, Premier Bulent Ecevit said the fighting on Cyprus was going "very well." Western diplomats said Turkey's aim was to win on the battlefield what it had been unable to accomplish at the abortive Geneva peace conference: to secure a third of the island for the Turkish Cypriots who number about one-fifth of the island's 700,000 people.

In Washington, President Gerald Ford was reported keeping close tabs on the situation. However, the United States and Great Britain were reported to have decided to keep hands off Cyprus for the moment since no willing participants could be found for a new round of peace talks.

Big Powers Maneuvers

Even so, the U.S. guided missile cruiser Little Rock, flagship of the U.S. 6th Fleet, recalled its crew from shore leave and put to sea two weeks early for an undisclosed destination. The Soviet Union sent three gunboats through the Dardanelles to reinforce its Mediterranean Fleet.

The United Nations Security Council, angered by a Turkish napalm air attack which killed three Austrian soldiers serving with the U.N. truce force, held a series of urgent meetings Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to get the dispute off the battlefield and back to the conference table.

But the guns didn't fall silent until Ecevit announced in Ankara Friday that Turkey had accomplished its objectives with the establishment of the "Attila Line" and was now willing to talk peace.

The escalation of the Cyprus crisis proved a windfall for the Soviets. At the outset, they had complained that the crisis was a plot to turn the island into a NATO base.

Instead, Greece pulled its armed forces out of NATO and found itself on the verge of war with its NATO ally, Turkey, much to the discomfiture of the United States, the kingpin of the Atlantic alliance.

14 teachers prepare for bilingual roles

Fourteen teachers from the Ontario-Montclair School District and the Upland School District have completed three weeks of Spanish training for a bilingual program which will begin in eight schools this fall.

The primary goal of the program will be to emphasize the use of two languages, English and Spanish, as mediums of instruction.

The Spanish program is part of Project Esperanza, a federally funded project designed to include courses of history and culture related to the Spanish language.

The eight schools participating in the program are Bon View, Mission, Euclid, Sultana, Mariposa, Moreno, Foothill Knolls and Upland Elementary. Parents who wish to enroll their children in the program should call Mr. Chavez, coordinator of the project, at 986-8000.

Tax rate for school district dips

A $20.8 million 1974-75 budget which allows a 31-cent tax cut and includes an 8 per cent salary increase for employes has been adopted by the Rowland school board.

Estimates call for a $4.52 per $100 of assessed valuation general purpose tax rate, a drop from last year's $4.83 rate.

The final computation will be made by the county.

The 1974-75 budget is the largest in the district's four-year history. Inflation and salary increases forced the district to use money traditionally held in reserves.

St. George to welcome 296

ONTARIO — St. George School expects to welcome 296 pupils this fall, a slight increase over last year.

School authorities say that an "increased emphasis" on keeping parents aware of the religion program, and involving them more in religious activities, are goals for the coming year.

The school also will continue an upgraded math program in grades four through eight. The ungraded reading program will continue in grades three through eight, with an extension of the "individualization aspect" of it.

Sister Bridget Murphy, principal, has announced that Stephen Tucker will be the new fourth-grade teacher this fall. Tucker was educated in La Verne, and previously taught school in Australia.

Opening of school will be Sept. 10.

For Sunday, Aug. 18

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be careful how you handle equipment. If you're too impatient or forceful you'll not only damage what you're working on but the tools as well.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may be a bit too intent today upon pleasing your appetite. You'll suffer later where the waistline is concerned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be selective about whom you invite into your home. There's a possibility someone rather rowdy could break something you treasure.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Phrase carefully what you say to a sensitive friend. She's in a touchy mood and likely to misinterpret your words.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Thank goodness this isn't a business day or you might be taken for a real ride because of your poor judgment in material matters.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) The way you're doing certain things is taking all the patience a loyal friend can muster not to give you a piece of her mind.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Whatever you do today, don't be coy. Not only doesn't it become you, but it will not accomplish what you deisre.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're on thin ice in your group activities at this time. This is because your aims are not in accord with your pals' goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) For some egocentric reasons, it's going to be very important to you that you dictate what others should do. They'll put you down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You're going to ty to impress someone with your knowledge about something you know very little about. Don't do it.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This is not a good day for you to attempt to work out business problems with those trying to enjoy themselves socially.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) This is one of those days you're prone to be very indecisive and put off something you shouldn't. However, you'll continue to neglect it.

Your Birthday
Aug. 18

Lots of opportunities to improve your position materially will come your way this year. Don't rely solely upon your luck, however, to carry you through.

For Monday, Aug. 19

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Even though certain household duties will be a drag, you'll feel a real sense of satisfaction after they're completed. Get going.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A concern of a serious nature you have with another can best be handled if you keep things social.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You might find some good buys for the home now if you shop wisely and haggle over the prices.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You have a great reserve of determination to draw from today, provided you set your sights on a definite target.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may hove to be a bit more adamant than usual about your position regarding a business situation so you can get your terms.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Stand up and be counted for one who has proven loyal to you, when this person comes under fire from an adversary.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Keep your goals to yourself but continue to work in an energetic and dedicated manner. Later, announce your target.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Additional responsibilities will be placed upon you to manage an outside activity. Why? Because another fails to do his part.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will have to be firmer now than you have in the past if you hope to recover something that is owed you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan 19) Advice is going to be offered to you that will be a rather bitter pill upon first hearing. Yet you should listen, because it is constructive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Even though it will be a bit inconvenient at this time you'll be better off in the long run to keep current on all obligations.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone with whom you have a close association is apt to rub you the wrong wrong way today. It's best you don't flare into open anger.

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Aug. 19

This year you may have to work a bit harder in order to get ahead. If you're diligent you'll have quite a bit to show for your efforts when the time comes to tally up.

Working off extra weight

By ERMA BOMBECK

My doctor flipped the weight of the scale over another notch, looked at me with annoyance, and said, "Man does not live by bread alone."

"You think I don't know that?" I said. "Any fool knows you have to make it into a sandwich, top it with homemade preserves, or cover it with a cheese sauce and make a casserole out of it."

"You are overweight, again," he said dryly.

"Like how much?"

"Like if you were scheduled to fight Mohammed Ali this fall, you would have to drop 15 pounds to make the heavyweight division. How much exercise do you get?"

"I leaned over a week ago Thursday for what I thought was a gingersnap cookie in the carpet, but it turned out to be a cork coaster and I haven't taken a chance since."

"Do you go to the refrigerator a lot?"

"Yes, and sometimes I even run."

"I have here a list of activities that tell you how many calories you can burn up per hour. I want you to go over the list and try to do at least one or two activities a day."

The list was depressing. An hour of housework burnt up 80 to 180 calories. . .ironing 50 to 60 and writing 10 to 20. I would have to arm-wrestle King Kong to make a difference.

Then a brilliant idea hit me. If I could do some vigorous exercises, I could eat all the fat foods I wanted and burn it off before it took root.

That night I had a piece of apple pie. Then I grabbed one of the kids' bicycles and pedalled for two hours. It was work, but it was worth it. I had paid for my folly.

The next night I had 40 potato chips. To make up for it, I did a little ironing that I had put back. (Actually I only ironed for 8 hours and put the rest of it back again).

The next afternoon I outdid myself. I found an Easter egg I had hidden from the kids in the freezer totalling 583 calories. I had to paint the house to work it off. Tha same night I had lobster in butter, which totalled 2,390 carloies. Checking my list I discovered I would have to row across Lake Erie and back to balance the calories.

Then, a terrible pattern began to form. I was borrowing on my energy and putting IOUs in the refrigerator. I owed two hours of carpentry for a bowl of cereal in cream; three miles of jogging for a French doughnut, and eight days of shoveling snow for a piece of birthday cake.

As I sit here writing this column I am in hock through 1975. As I told my doctor, the only way I can possibly catch up is to be an oarsman on a slave ship. He is making the necessary arrangements.

Where is little Heidi?

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — A ragged Teddy Bear sleeps alone at 2622 10th Avenue East in Seattle.

Teddy was a special friend of Heidi Brigit Peterson. But last February four-year-old Heidi vanished from her front yard and Teddy and the other stuffed animals on Heidi's bed are left unattended.

The disappearance of little Heidi has attracted attention through the United States and

HEIDI PETERSON

Canada. The search for her is one of the most extensive, organized efforts ever launched for a missing child.

Flyers containing a picture and a description of Heidi have been mailed with bank statements and telephone bills. An outdoor advertising firm has donated four billboards which carry her photograph and ask, "Where is Heidi?"

Seven Seattle printers donated their time and materials to print 40,000 leaflets which were distributed throughout the Puget Sound area by Jaycee club members, Kiwanians, Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls. And 250 posters were placed on Seattle city buses. Other posters have been distributed from here to Miami, Florida.

Heidi was last seen by her mother, Sally Peterson, playing with her two-year-old brother, Carl, in the front yard of the Peterson home. That was about 1:30 p.m. Feb. 21.

The only response Carl has been able to give when he is asked what happened is, "Heidi go."

When she disappeared, Heidi was 43 inches tall and weighed 42 pounds. She has dark brown hair, brown eyes, an olive complexion and was wearing a navy quilted parka with buttons and white fake fur trim.

Mrs. Peterson said the girl was a responsible and dependable child and the mother is convinced Heidi would never have gotten into an automobile with a stranger because the girl had been warned against such behavior.

Rewards totaling $10,000 have been posted for information leading to Heidi's return. An anonymous source put up half the total.

Prompted by Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., the FBI has entered the case on the theory that Heidi has been kidnaped and taken across the state line.

Mrs. Peterson, a business graduate from Marquette University, and her husband Roy, a carpenter, are convinced Heidi is alive. So are the more than 100 neighbors, family friends and other concerned persons who form the nucleus of a committee dedicated to solving the mystery of the missing girl.

Roy Peterson says the fact that neither city police nor the FBI have been able to find her is "encouraging."

"This means somebody has her," he says.

Baby boom in Italy?

The energy shortage caused the Italian government to call for an early closing of restaurants there. And for less movie going. And for shortened TV broadcasts. And for a ban on Sunday driving. Unwise. Highly unwise. Government officials now say a baby boom is expected to complicate Italy's energy problems considerably.

IF YOU'RE nearsighted, you can explain the why of it to curious questioners merely by telling them that your eyeballs are too long.

FIREMEN are known to be far more prone than most other profgessional fellows to heart attacks.

MAN is the only animal with a jutting chin.

WOMEN

When a previously unacquainted man and woman meet, whether they say anything to each other depends almost entirely on the woman. Or so a scholar contends. Tests prove that the gentleman simple does not open up a conversation unless the lady cues him with some sort of expression. Interesting. Still, I've seen flippant fellows toss uninvited wisecracks at passing girls. But maybe they don't count. This authority claims all pickup meetings in public bistros are engineered by the women.

Q — "LOUIE, how many birds can you list that are named after the sounds they make?"

A — Cuckoo, bobolink, whippoorwill, chickadee, bob white, twohee and peewee. Can't think of any others right now. Wait until after the next field trip.

ARTHRITIS

That numerous arthritis patients can prodict weather changes is no news. But the fact was confirmed recently by the University of Pennsylvania's Climatron. It's a room where the weather is man-made by the control of temperature, humidity, barometric pressure, so on. Nearly all of the 32 arthritis patients, who sat through a manufactured storm there, complained of pains early in the experiment.

College town crime rate skyrockets

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) — Officials of this college town where the crime rate skyrocketed 56.4 per cent in the first three months of this year said Tuesday the increase apparently was homegrown, rather than a result of an invasion by outside organized crime.

Durham, a city of 102,000, and home of Duke University and North Carolina Central University, recently changed its method of reporting crimes and now include crimes reported on the campuses. A spokesman said, however, there had been no significant increase in this category.

Statistics released Monday by the FBI showed the South had shown the greatest jump in increased crime during the first three months of the year and that Durham registered the steepest climb among the cities.

Maj. Theodore Seagroves, acting police chief in Durham, could offer no single explanation for the increase, but said: "We don't think it's organized. It's a citywide thing."

Criminals, Seagroves said, "move in on you and they just do it (commit crimes) until you can get them out of circulation. We're hoping this is what we're running into right now. It doesn't seem to have a pattern.

Seagroves said arrests, along with crime rates, have risen by 10 per cent in the first five months of 1974.

Of serious crimes included in the federal index of national crime rates, only murders were reported down here, from 12 in the first five months of 1973 to nine this year.

Total reported crime for the period was 1,818, up by 663 from last year. Federal figures for the first three months of the year here put the increase at 56.4 per cent over a year ago, and later local statistics showed a further increase to 57 per cent in the five-month period.

Index crimes include murder, rape, robbery, burglary, aggravated assault, larceny over $50 and auto theft.

Federal figures released Monday for the first quarter of the year showed crime was also up in the state's four other largest cities, but not by such a large amount. Charlotte reported a jump in reported serious crimes of 46 per cent; Greensboro of 36 per cent; Raleigh of 31 per cent and Winston-Salem of 13 per cent.

"There is just an increase in the number of crimes being committed, and it is difficult to explain why crimes are up," said city Public Safety Director Esai Berenbaum. "I really don't know."

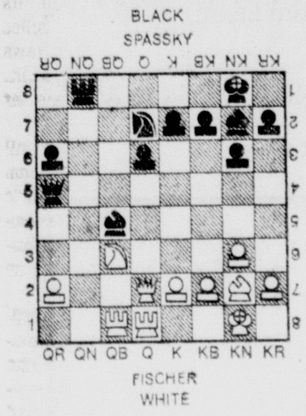
Chess

Mind must be agile

Chess is the enemy of mechanical thought. The mind must be agile enough to follow the labyrinthine twists and turns a position may take. An uninspired or a tired mird may miss the more unusual move that is so often the "only" move in a position. Even worse, in its lassitude, it may stumble in the most routine of situations, especially if some sight quirk is present.

The last pitfall befell Boris Spassky in game eight of his match with Bobby Fischer. Spassky found himself on the wrong end of a pin when Fischer suddenly broke a pin to Brois's disadvantage.

(Diagram 1)



Fischer's move?

You can see the position in diagram one. Black, who has just played 1. . .N-Q2, overlooked white's reply 2. N-Q5! This unpinning poses the double threat of 3. QxQ and NxP check, as well as RxB. There ensued 2. . . QxQ; 3. NxP check, K-B1; 4. RxQ, KxN; 5. RxB, etc. Fischer, who was already ahead, a rook for a bishop, has won back Spassky's extra pawn and relieved the pressure on his position. The rest of the game was mere technique.

All well and good, if this was the first chess game ever played. But the unpinning threat N-Q5 is routine in this kind of position, and Spassky, who has seen thousands of such situations, would normally recognize the danger in a flash. But Spassky was laboring terribly at this point in his match with Fischer and 2. N-Q5 was only one of many disasters that overtook him.

The technical textbook lesson to be learned here is that every pin contains a latent double attack. The pinned piece and the shielded piece may suddenly become perpetrators themselves. As you can see, the mindless muttering of the coffeehouse player, "A pin is a pin, is a pin, is a pin, is a pin, etc." is no guide to the realities of competitive chess, where contradictions abound.

Recently, the young Russian Tukmagov, made a most elementary pin-blunder in the diagram two position against Keres. Here he has just played 1. . .Q-Q2, which unexplicably allowed 2. NxKP!, winning a pawn, according to our illustrated formula.

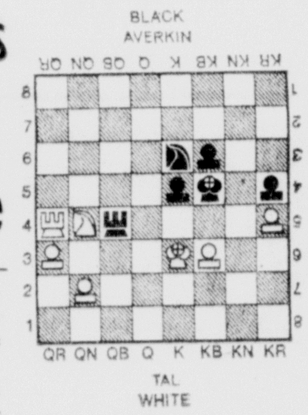
A more reasonable blunder took place to create our third position from the last round game, Tal vs. Averkin, in the recent U.S.S.R. championship. After a prolonged and difficult struggle, Averkin, with a draw in hand, found a way to lose. He has just played 1. . . .R-B5???, "pinning" the white knight.

(Diagram 3)



Tal wins

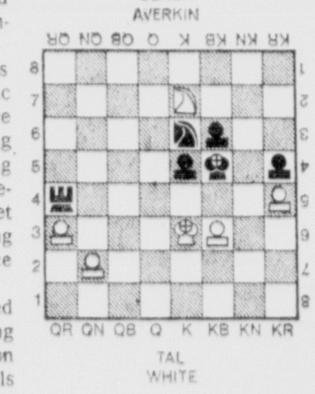
Tal, sking no questions, quickly played 2. N-Q5 and Averkin resigned. There is no way he can effectively meet the dual threat of 3. RxR and 3. N-K7 checkmate (see diagram four).

(Diagram 4)



It would have been MATE!

For Tal, Averkin's mishap was momentous. Without this gift victory, he would have finished four places lower in the standings and not have qualified for next year's Soviet championship.

Nuclear plants to be major electric source

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Nuclear reactors may generate at least 50 per cent of the nation's electricity by the year 2000, according to L. Manning Muntzing, an official of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Muntzing said recently that current estimates of the growth rate for nuclear power also indicate that almost 2000 reactors operating by 1985 will produce one-quarter of America's eleciric power needs.

However, Muntzing said, even if all the country's electricity were generated by nuclear fission, few deaths would be caused.

Muntzing, the director of regulation for the AEC, referred to a study which showed that "routine releases of radioactivity would cause about eight cancer deaths per year in this country" should there be 100 per cent dependency on nuclear fission.

He said the current risks from the 48 licensed atomic plants today are little more than the danger of "driving 100 miles, going swimming for one extra hour in our lifetime, in smoking one cigaret every eight years or in being a hundredth of an ounce overweight."

The chief danger associated with nuclear power, Muntzing said, is the possible diversion of nuclear fuels by criminals or terrorists.

Quake studies ordered for hospital site

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — County Supervisors have ordered studies to be performed at the Olive View Medical Center site in Sylmar to determine earthquake fault conditions.

An earthquake on Feb. 9, 1971, demolished the original $23.5 million hospital. Earlier this week, an aftershock measuring 4.3 in the Richter scale was centered in the same area.

The firm of Woodward, McNeil & Associates will analyze the site at a maximum fee of $150,000 to discover whether it is feasible to rebuild there.

Three wounded in gun battle

PASO ROBLES (UPI) — Two officers and a suspected gunman were wounded in a short gun battle, San Luis Obispo county authorities said.

Deputies said the incident occurred recently after they arrived at a residence where a suspect had a cab driver pinned behind his cab with a shotgun. The man was ordered to give up his weapon, and a five-minute gun battle erupted.

Report from America

The people car

By GIL GODFREY

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was not a dream, a mirage, an idle fantasy.

It was a hard, realistic fact —but the people who saw it shook their heads, rubbed their eyes, stared in utter disbelief.

There, into the grimy West 4th Street station on a torrid morning in July glided a subway that looked as if it were commuting between Buckingham Palace and Windsor Castle.

The vision in silver and red drew to a smooth halt. Handsome windowed doors opened silently on air-cooled interiors of multicolored carpeted floors, vinyl-covered foam rubber seats, subtle indirect lighting. An air of immaculate spaciousness lent the scene a surrealist flavor.

"What's going on here?""I don't believe it!""This can't be New York!"

Straphangers looked about uneasily to see if they were on the right platform. Some, afraid to get on, plopped down on benches to await the next train.

The ones who bit the bullet enjoyed the best subway ride of their lives. They found themselves aboard a State-of-the-Art car developed by the Urban Mass Transportation Administration of the U.S. Department of Transportation. The car is so named because it represents the best available technical know-how in the art of rail rapid transit.

Actually, the State-of-the-Art train consists of two cars—one designed for subway use and the other for suburban commuter traffic on such lines as Penn Central or the Long Island Rail Road.

The suburban car seats 62 passengers and has a maximum capacity of 220. There are tables between some of the seats, but otherwise it closely resembles the subway car.

This car seats 72 persons and can accommodate 300. The floors of both cars are covered with red and blue carpets. The one-piece molded fiberglass chairs are colored green, blue and red and are equipped with upholstered cushions.

Four seats are arranged back to back, two on each side. In front of, and behind, each fourseat unit are three seats in a straight row. Some have arm rests beside them.

There are no straps to hang onto, but there are a number of leather-padded metal poles for standers to grasp. The car is skilfully illuminated by indirect lighting of ceiling and walls. Each side has four sets of doors and three large windows.

The train took off and stopped at the stations along the route with effortless ease, and there were no jerks at any time during the trip. Its maximum speed is 80 miles an hour, but New York laws set a 50-mile-an-hour limit. The train can accelerate at 264 feet a second.

Most extraordinary of all was the quietness. Insulation factors built into the car's construction enable passengers to hear each other perfectly when they converse in ordinary tones.

The riders' reactions? Officials of Boeing Vertol Company, systems manager for the train, quote customers as saying: "Isn't it wonderful!" and then adding quickly: "Isn't it a shame it couldn't last in New York!"

The interiors of the cars are vandal-resistant but not vandalproof. The cars were therefore kept under 24-hour police guard during their July 8th to 13th demonstration run in New York.

The State-of-the-Art train will go to Boston next, and then to Cleveland, Chicago and Philadelphia.

The cars, built by the St. Louis Car Division of General Steel Industries, cost an estimated $350,000 apiece.

Municipal transit officials have always been averse to bold experiments. Nevertheless, the future looks black for the cattle cars which have for so long ruled the underground. The era of the People Car may well be at hand.

Marcos restricts Philippine press

MANILA (UPI) — The martial law government of President Ferdinand E. Marcos has extracted the teeth of the Philippine press, once considered among the freest—and most irresponsible—in Asia.

Even some of the president's supporters, however, now fear that the surgery went too far.

They see the few newspapers permitted to publish as embarrassingly tame, even sychophantic.

Some government officials say they have privately urged the papers to offer some "constructive criticism" to the government Marcos calls the "new society." Evidently, none of them has taken the advice.

Twenty-one months after martial law was imposed there still is almost nothing in the newspapers that might be even remotely considered criticism of the government, constructive or otherwise.

Instead, the papers sing the praises of the "new society" in their news columns, as well as on their editorial pages.

And still the government deals with the local press with a rather heavy hand.

Teodoro F. Valencia, whose widely read column appears in Bulletin Today, one of the largest newspapers in the Philippines, reported that "the Department of Information served a stern warning to the press to stop going overboard for Miss Universe stories at the expense of the more meaningful stories relevant to the national cultural reform."

Still, that was a mild admonition compared to what the press faced when Marcos imposed martial law on Sept. 21, 1972.

More than 30 journalists were jailed within a few days. All have now been released but few have gone back into journalism.

Only three major Manila newspapers—of the 18 dailies publishing at the time—have been permitted to resume publication. All are practicing "self-imposed" censorship.

There is an underground press, mimeographed and distributed by mail or hand, which criticizes the government, but it apparently is not widely read.

Foreign news agencies were under the same stringent "ground rules" as the local press during the first weeks of martial law, but the government has pledged that foreign agencies will be permitted to report news freely from the Philippines.

Many Filipinos profess to miss the old press not at all. They say it was a wild and wooly press as corrupt as any in Asia, although some acknowledge it has been replaced by a press that lacks the teeth to bite into hard news.

MAPA votes to support Brown bid

FRESNO (UPI) — Delegates to the Mexican-American Political Association's endorsing convention voted this week to back Democrat Edmund G. Brown Jr. for governor in the November election.

The delegates also endorsed State Sen. Mervyn Dymally, D-Los Angeles, for lieutenant governor; Assemblywoman March Fong, D-Oakland, for secretary of state; Assemblyman William Bagley, R-San Rafael, for controller; William Norris for attorney general, and Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., for re-election.

About 300 delegates attended the three-day convention at the Fresno Townehouse.

MAPA State President Margaret Cruz of San Francisco said that lobbying for MAPA support has been intense in the past few weeks by candidates for nearly every major state race.

"The whole political scene has been unnerved by what's been happening in Washington," she said.

Water pollution funds little help for problem

By MICHAEL J. CONLON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the early and nearly forgotten days of the administration, before Watergate became a household word, the topic most often on the political tongue was impoundment.

Money flowing from Congress was pinched off by a White House which invoked concerns about inflation and fiscal responsibility. There were predictions of doom, forecasts of constitutional crises —even lawsuits.

Now comes the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) saying one of the most publicized and debated of those impoundments — President Nixon's refusal to spend $9 billion of the $18 billion Congress authorized to help clean up the nation's waters — really hasn't made much difference after all. EPA says it probably couldn't have spent the money if it had it.

The money was to have gone to help cities build sewage treatment plants, with the overall goal of returning the nation's lakes and rivers to their original state by 1985. That target date has been pushed back by at least 10 years, EPA officials say, mainly because the study and planning required by the 1972 law is so complex and time-consuming that cities are only now beginning to come up with plans that qualify for the federal funds.

EPA has committed about $3 billion for sewage treatment projects and expects to do the same with another $6 billion in the coming 12 months. But of the other $9 billion impounded, Deputy EPA Administrator John R. Quarles Jr. says:

"It is very important in a constitutional sense. But in practical terms of this program, it has not been a very large factor. In a general sense it (the other $9 billion) would not have made a material difference."

The reason, Quarles and other EPA officials say, is that a city wanting to apply for sewage treatment money must first explore all the possible alternative ways to handle its problem and choose the one that will get it the most for the money —what the government calls cost effectiveness. It must be able to show EPA it made such an investigation, as well as one covering the environmental impact of the project — whether it will pollute the air, endanger the surrounding landscape or whatever.

So far that has been a very slow process. It may have been delayed even more by a lack of know-how, or a possible shortage of experts available to cities which need the studies made —although EPA officials are less sure this is a factor.

Quarles and others are not willing to say, however, that the $9 billion that wasn't available would have made absolutely no difference in the long run. In at least two cases —Las Vegas, Nev., and in the Washington, D. C., area —there are projects far enough developed to use more money than EPA has.

And the biggest long-term impact, one official said, is that some smaller cities whose problems are farther down the priority list have not done even the basic initial planning because they're not sure the federal money will ever trickle down to them.

Putting Duke back together

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — There was nothing really special about Duke, a giraffe who spent most his life in relative comfort at Seattle's Woodland Park Zoo.

As a matter of fact, Duke was fairly mediocre among giraffes. He wasn't the biggest, nor the smallest. At about 16 feet from his clove hooves to the tip of his horns, he weighed about a ton and a half.

The only thing special about Duke is that he fell dead one day at the age of 19 —a fairly ripe age for giraffes.

The zookeepers didn't just simply carve him up and incinerate him or toss his carcass to the lions. For some reason, they decided to save his bones for posterity and stored them in a couple of oil drums.

That's how Duke came to be the subject of a news conference which attracted reporters, photographers and television cameramen at the Pacific Science Center.

The media gathered around the reassembled bones to hear the story of Duke's reconstruction.

Walter Simon, a small mustachioed man, looked all the smaller standing with his head at about Duke's hip socket level told how he and a group of 16 high school students managed to put Duke back together again.

Simon said he didn't even know Duke when he died in 1969. But he learned about three years ago that although zookeeper Jack Simmons had saved Duke's bones nothing was being done with them. They were simply sitting and amouldering in those oil drums.

So Simon and Simmons got together with the Pacific Science Center and enlisted high school students with strong noses and set about, with the help of Max Musgrove, a senior structural engineer for the Boeing Co., and Dr. Gary Zimmerman, dean of science and engineering at Seattle University, to rebuild Duke as a lasting exhibit.

Simon said the group spent every Saturday for five months cleaning and inventoring every bone from the first cervical vertabrae to the left artio dactyla. Then they polished and painted every bone, right down to the tip of Duke's tail.

One thing especially noteworthy, even to the casual viewer, is how well Duke's dentures fit together. One can only wonder at how many tons of vegetation those teeth chomped away in his lifetime.

Simon, who hosts a radio talk show (on Seattle station KTW) and runs a marketing research firm, said he learned something interesting about Duke's skeleton.

"It tears down in about 15 minutes, sets up in an hour."

MS victim pursues a new crusade: finding the cause

By MARIANNE WOODS
P-B Staff Writer

Mike Minnehan hates the word "handicapped" and with good reason. In his eyes the disease that makes him walk like a drunk, tires him easily and has forced him into retirement at the age of 41 has not handicapped him.

It's given him time to spend with his family and time to think. "It has hindered me within limits, such as the things I can and cannot do, but it has also opened the widest of doors—time. I now have nothing but time on my hands," he said.

Minnehan, a balding jovial man, is a victim of multiple sclerosis, often referred to as MS. This is a disease that breaks down the electrical impulses traveling between the brain and the muscles. The disease is marked with worsening symptoms and remissions, causing its victims to experience total or partial disability.

Doctors estimate there are over half a million persons living in the United States that are victims of MS. The symptoms of the disease include paralysis, double vision, periods of blindness, loss of balance, extreme weakness, loss of coordination and speech and hearing difficulties.

No cure yet

There is no known cure for the disease and no definite ideas as to its origin. Some doctors believe it is caused by a virus. Others believe it is connected with a person's geographical location. The latter theory is based on statistics which tend to show the greatest number of MS cases are linked to persons who lived during their childhood and early adolescent years between the 40th and 60th parallels. But no one knows for sure. The only thing that doctors and researchers are certain of is that MS is not hereditary. "Thank God," said Minnehan, who is the father of five children.

Minnehan, a former advertising salesman, is a resident of Claremont and is only partially disabled by the disease. He can still drive a car and unlike his friend, Mrs. Shirley Kooman, who lives across the street and also suffers from MS, he can walk. Mrs. Kooman, who had MS since she was 22, must live each day in a wheelchair.

Minnehan is luckier than most victims for his case is regarded as mild. He is not bedridden and not confined to a wheelchair. But the disease continues to manifest itself and take its toll on his life. For several years, the exterior skin on the right side of his body has been numb and the right side of his face has lost its sensitivity to cold, heat and even pain. Mike discovered this fact one morning while shaving. "I was looking into the mirror and kept seeing blood coming out of my face and I wasn't feeling a thing." Since then he has had to throw away his hand razor and buy an electric one. "That way there is no chance for me to cut myself," he said.

Shower a luxury

Minnehan is also still able to take showers, a luxury not shared by many other MS victims. "Yes, I can still take a shower," he grinned, "but I have to brace myself by keeping one hand on the wall at all times. Otherwise I lose my balance and fall."

Besides the physical pain an MS victim must bear, there are also many mental and emotional stresses. The self consciousness of walking differently or falling down unexpectedly has caused many emotional problems to arise. "But," Minnehan said, "let them (people) gawk. At first I was embarassed but now I'm used to it."

But it wasn't always that way for Minnehan. Before MS was diagnosed he thought he was going insane. He found himself falling down stairs and losing his balance for no apparent reason. Doctors even suggested that his problems were psychosomatic in nature.

Minnehan tells of the embarassment relating to a particular incident which finally led him to believe that whatever was wrong wasn't his mind. "While attending an auction back East," he said, "I lost my balance and fell down a hill. I began to roll and couldn't control my direction. There was a woman and two children at the bottom of the hill and I rolled right past them and onto the road. All I could say to them was 'I'm not drunk' I was quite embarrassed."

First attack strange

Following this incident, Minnehan had what was later called his first MS attack, although MS wasn't officially diagnosed until 1973, six years after this first seizure.

"My initial attack," relates Minnehan, "manifested itself in about two hours. I called on one of my accounts and was dizzy and off-balance. I thought I was coming down with a cold or something and went to call on another account. I had to drive about two miles to the second account and had to make a left-turn onto a busy street. I made the turn and the whole world went topsy-turvy. I went to the side of the road and waited for things to straighten out but they didn't."

Minnehan said he finally called friends who came and took him home. This attack lasted for one month during which time he was hospitalized and tested. "On the 28th day after my attack," he recalled, "my vision and balance came back. In about 48 hours I felt 85 per cent better. I went back to work on the third day and continued to work about three and one-half years." Then MS forced him into retirement.

Unwilling to give in

Yet Minnehan refuses to give in to this nightmare. Instead, he has taken his new-found time and written a questionnaire which is sent to other MS victims living within the United States. "It's a starting point, a stab in the dark," he said.

Minnehan is hoping that through the questionnaire he may find some distinctive link in the background of the respondees that might give researchers concrete facts to work in finding a cure.

"If they find a cure in my lifetime," Minnehan said, "I'll take my wife and meet all the people I sent the questionaires to." It has taken him four months to assemble the questionaire, the first of which was sent to 100 persons in February. Since then he has supplemented and revised the questionnaire three times and has sent it out to over 350 persons. "I've had a good response, with over a 50 per cent return."

Minnehan has taken it upon himself to bear the costs of distributing the questionnaires. He estimates the cost of distribution has run him over $800, mainly in printing, postal and other miscellaneous charges. He has received some donations but the brunt of the cost is on his shoulders. Yet, with only his wife working and two children living at home, he refuses to abandon his project.

Hopes for cure

"My reason for doing this study," he explained, "is because of a strong personal belief that there must be more than a geographically similarity in the background of people who have become victims of MS."

"I feel strongly that in digging for and finding those 'other' as yet undiscovered similarities lies the major hope of eventually finding the cause and the cure for multiple sclerosis. I feel that those elements are far too important to be left to the chance that someone will "mention" them."

The greatest advantages Minnehan sees in conducting the study himself is that people are willing to confide in a fellow victim bringing a high rate of return of questionnaires and that there is no red tape, making it easier to send out the questionnaire and eventually get it evaluated.

Minnehan can only live from day to day and is saddened when he must project into the future. His face takes on a a pale, somber air as he talks about future plans. "My plans for the future are quite 'iffy' " he noted. "If my condition gets better or no worse than it is now, we (he and his wife) will do much of what we had originally planned to do. We both like to collect antiques and we like to travel. We plan to devote a lot of time to each. If it doesn't, he adds, "I'll do what I can."

30-million-year-old rhino skull

Valley youths play role in archeological finds

Five youths from Claremont and two from Cucamonga were among a group of backpackers who recently returned from a 6,000-mile, six-week tour of the Western United States, where they uncovered significant paleontological finds for Webb School in Claremont.

The trip, sponsored by Peccary Society, field research and exploration arm of the Raymond M. Alf Paleontology Museum at the school, was staffed by Connie Vadheim, assistant curator; Mr. and Mrs. William Ripley; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur House; and joined midway by Alf and Headmaster Stephen R. Longley.

Enjoying the excitement of the find of 30 skulls, including a Subyhyracodon, a prehistoric rhino more than 30 million years old, were Rolin Baker, 1475 N. Mills Ave., Chris Cox, 423 Troy Court, Sue Johnson, 648 Delaware Drive, David Herman, 357 W. 10th St., and Bob Gorman, 1333 N. Mountain Ave., all of Claremont; and Mark and Peter Anton, 7611 Buena Vista Drive, Cucamonga.

While Peccary Society has in the past stressed ancient paleontological finds in the millions-of-years range, the group this year was fortunate to discover Paleo-Indian material 9,000 years old near Crawford, Neb.

The Peccary Society was named after a famous find, a 15-million-year-old peccary or pig skull which identified a new genus and species of that animal.

The backpacking experience began after school was out, with the caravan drive to Bishop where the backpacking trip began. Backpacking sites were set up in the High Sierra, the Grand Tetons and Bridger National Forest.

A trip to Salt Lake City briefly explored the Mormon history, and a one-day raft trip on the Green River marked the halfway point.

From Dinosaur National Monument in Utah, the backpackers went to the Badland National Monument in South Dakota for a visit of the Medicine Bow Mountain Interstate Park and Mount Rushmore.

The group spent six days on a fossil hunt south of Scenic, S.D., then spent a week in the Oglala National Grasslands near Crawford, Neb. before heading west and south back to California via Bryce and Zion national parks.

Before they left on the trip, students were given two weeks of classes at the museum where they learned the geology of the Western United States.

Ayala moves to prevent tax losses to area if Sacramento merger voted

State Sen. Ruben Ayala is seeking to prevent local cities from losing state motor vehicle and gasoline taxes should the City of Sacramento and Sacramento County be consolidated next November.

Should this be approved, then both levels of government would be permitted to continue receiving the appropriations which are based on population. This could mean a bonus of $5.5 million at the expense of other cities and counties within the state, he explained.

Voters in Sacramento County and Sacramento will decide the issue at the Nov. 5 election. Authority to conduct such an election was approved by state voters in the June election.

In a move to prevent a double allotment, Ayala, D-20th Dist., has introduced legislation that would permit the city and county to count the same residents only once in determining their share of these funds. The bill contains an urgency clause which allows it to be heard in committee before the Senate adjourns next month.

State funds involved total 33 cents per capita. This includes 23 cents derived from the motor vehicle in-lieu tax and 10 cents from gasoline taxes.

Ayala, of Chino, reported the City of Pomona would lose $28,836 from these funds unless his bill is enacted.

Estimated losses from other area cities include: Chino, $7,870, Montclair, $7,474, Ontario, $21,648, Upland, $12,507, San Bernardino, $35,840 and Los Angeles, $859,000.

"The bill doesn't penalize Sacramento city and county," he noted. "They will not lose or gain anything. This will only prevent the city and county from counting the same residents twice."

Ayala said he introduced the measure after meeting with a group of Los Angeles County residents.

City to study leasing vacant depot

Proposed leasing of the vacant Union Pacific Railroad depot at First and Thomas streets, Pomona, for use by non-profit civic organizations, will be discussed by the Pomona City Council at its Monday, 8 p.m. meeting.

Fred Sharp, executive director of the Community Redevelopment Agency, said the railroad company is offering to lease the building and premises for $100 a month plus taxes.

Among organizations being considered as possible users are the Pomona Valley Art Association and the Pomona Bicentennial Committee.

City Administrator Jerrold Gonce is recommending that the council appoint two of its members to meet with chairmen of the Cultural Arts Commission, art association and bicentennial committee to discuss use, insurance, maintenance and other aspects of the proposal.

The council is expected to pass two resolutions formalizing action previously taken to revoke the massage technician licenses of 11 persons.

Another resolution to be brought before the council would authorize an agreement with the County of Los Angeles for the employment of sheriff's deputies for the county fair in Pomona.

The council will receive a recommendation from the library board of trustees to call for new bids on modification work at the library. Officials said the first bids received were too high.

A group calling itself Concerned Citizens for Mental Health has requested an audience with the council.

Brackett Field chief transferred

Monroe Upchurch, manager of Brackett Field in La Verne for the past four years, has been transferred to the Compton Airport.

He will be succeeded by Ray Beeniga; manager of the Compton Airport. Both airports are owned and operated by Los Angeles County.

Upchurch, who started with the aviation department in 1960 as an airport service man, was later promoted to assistant manager of Brackett Field before being transferred as manager to the El Monte and Compton airports. He was assigned to the La Verne airport in 1970.

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions—fast. It costs you nothing. Call Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. or write Heartline, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415. Remember, Heartline pays for all calls on its toll-free number . . . 800-543-2393.

Heartline: I am planning on moving to Arizona, but I've heard that Medicare is not good there. Why not?—F.D.

Answer: Medicare is the same in all 50 states. You may have Medicare confused with Medicaid. Medicaid operates in every state but Arizona.

Heartline: My husband is collecting disability Social Security. I have two children under 18 who also collect. My husband is now very seriously ill. If he passes away, what happens to the children's Social Security?—Mrs. T.

Answer: It will be increased for both children.

Heartline: Can a family settle a will without an attorney if all agree to comply with the contents of that will?—H.S.

Answer: A will does not have to be drawn up by an attorney, but any will must be probated by the courts. The conditions of a will cannot be settled between the inheritors alone.

Heartline: After all of modern man's efforts to create a society of wait-in-line, call-back, put-off and red tape, I honestly believe you are going to set him back 50 years. I called you and within the time it took to ask the question, you had the answer. Don't let modern man catch you.—Mr. W.

Answer: We sent your letter through the proper channels and were finally told we could thank you.

Heartline: I am on Medicaid and also Medicare. I've heard Medicaid will pay my $6.70 for Medicare Part B benefits. Is this true?—A.T.

Answer: Yes, in many states this is true. Please check with your welfare department, which handles your Medicaid.

Heartline: What is the difference between partial disability and total disability under Social Security?—R.L.

Answer: Under Social Security, benefits are paid for total disability. There are no benefits for partial disability.

Pitzer plans night college for adults

This September Pitzer College will inaugurate a program that is designed to meet the special problems and needs of post-college-age students.

According to Dr. James B. Jamieson, vice president and coordinator of the New Resources Program, individuals admitted to the program will be regular students and will be eligible to participate in all the activities open to Pitzer students.

Typically, he said, applicants for the program are older and have not been registered in a formal education program for some years and now wish to begin or return to college. Most are part-time students because of full-time jobs or heavy commitments at home.

"The program attempts to meet the special problems and needs of these students," he explained, "and make it easier for them to attend a small, college such as Pitzer."

Application procedures, which can be undertaken immediately, are designed to stress the older applicant's experience and his or her reasons for wishing to begin or return to college.

Post-college-age students wishing to take a few courses will not be discouraged, but the program is primarily for those wishing to pursue a bachelor's degree upon the successful completion of 32 courses of credit.

Review of applicants, handled by the vice president's office, will be based on a written application, transcripts, letters of recommendation, and interviews with a faculty member and with an admissions committee member.

Appropriate courses taken at an accredited college or university will be transferable, and, with the consent of his or her faculty adviser, a student may request credit for a Demonstration of Learning Portfolio, which normally would receive a maximum credit of four courses.

Students enrolled in the program will have three curriculum alternatives: enrollment in regular courses, independent studies, and specially arranged courses and seminars.

Under regular courses, 10 are available in the evening during each of the two semesters, in such fields as anthropology, communications, economics, writing, folklore, sociology, Hebrew, political philosophy, environmental studies and history. In addition, students accepted in the program may enroll in some courses offered by the other Claremont Colleges Pomona College, Scripps College, Claremont Men's College, and Harvey Mudd College.

For more information on the new program, contact the vice president's office, 105 Avery Hall, Pitzer College, Claremont 91711, or call 626-6511, Ext. 3915.

Opinion

Is there a saint in our future?

Some months back when a writer asked Gerald Ford about his loyalty to Richard Nixon, the vice president replied that he would remain devoted until or unless (paraphrase) "I ever became convinced that I'd not been told the truth."

That's Jerry. Eagle Scout. Honest and righteous. Once when he was a congressman and a reserve Naval officer he turned down a Pentagon promotion because he felt it wasn't deserved. Another time he was quoted as saying, and meaning, "truth is the glue that holds government together." During the Senate hearings on his vice presidential nomination all the forces of law, including 430 investigating FBI agents, failed to turn up a dime's worth of evil-do in the Ford family closet.

Indeed, his apparently commendable ethical conduct has become as well known in the land as the references to his allegedly limited mental capacity (Lyndon Johnson said he doubted if Ford could walk and chew gum at the same time). One White House story has it that Ford was chosen over John Connelly for Veep because "the nation couldn't survive another Spiro Agnew and Jerry's too dumb to be dishonest."

It may be, of course, one can not rule it out these days, that events will yet remove Ford from the side of the angels. The way things go in Washington, badly as of late, some scrap of paper or a long forgotten aide may smear the man from Michigan. But even if we do presume for the moment he is as straight arrow as Tonto, we must also ask ourselves whether honesty in this case is enough. It is time to insist that Richard Nixon's unelected successor give the people more than just honest rule.

Unfortunately, there is little in Ford's political history to suggest he can promise much more. Politically he has been a mossback, philosophically a Yahoo. One of his biographers, Nesman Bud Vestal of Michigan, says the nation should expect "no bold innovations or great New Deals" from President Ford: "I expect he'd be inclined to stick with Nixon's programs, but even some of them, the more liberal ones, would be dropped. The Nixon family assistance idea, for example, is the kind of thing that horrifies Jerry. It's too radical for him."

Actually, the record shows, most bold social programs horrify Ford. In Congress he was opposed to massive federal aid to schools, opposed to Medicare in 1965, opposed to increasing the minimum wage in 1960, '66 and '73. Even civil rights legislation received only tacit Ford approval. Farm lobbyists in 1972 gave him a rock bottom 20 per cent rating for votes he cast on agriculture bills. In that same year organized labor rated rated him only 11 per cent in favor of laws affecting the nation's labor class. "At least Jerry's consistent," says a colleague, "all his political life he has been anti-working man."

Naturally, there is good reason why Ford has not been able, in two decades, to find time for the problems of commoners. His hours have been too much occupied with the elite. Big business considers him one of its own. The chief lobbyist for U.S. Steel is one of his best friends. Congressional proposals favoring industry (such as federal aid to Lockheed) invariably win his nod. "Bigness is no sin," says Ford. Certainly not. But an anti-people, pro-business attitude in an unelected president may be close to similar mockery.

Despite this prospect there remains in many the hope Ford will green as president. He has said as much by advising reporters that his record "reflects Grand Rapids" and that as a national officer he "can be more flexible." Well, maybe. On the other hand there are nagging doubts beginning to form about Gerald Ford now that he looms so large in our future. How dreadful it would be if, in the rush to get rid of a discredited president, we were in the end stuck with a fellow whose only fitness for leadership was saintliness.

Labor Day, 1974

There is a scent of change in the wind with the arrival of Labor Day. For Americans, the last golden moments of this final three-day summer holiday barely fade into memory when autumn moves in, turning our thoughts away from watermelon, tennis and the like.

Suddenly, it is time to head back to school, and a new whirl of sports and homework fill the evenings. As the youngsters tackle the classroom with renewed vigor, the adults will hopefully head into the season with a sense of rededication to the principles of good, honest work. Today, as during the first commemoration of Labor Day in 1882, the importance of the workingman and woman's efforts deserve recognition. Their hard work makes a high standard of living a reality for their families and country.

Labor Day, September 2, 1974, can be a day of new beginnings for all of us. How we respond to the challenges around us will decide how successful we are in attaining our our goals—whether educational or career-oriented.

This is Pomona, not Beverly Hills

A noble group has been organized to study a noble proposal. The group is the Residential Occupancy Study Committee and the proposal is the Residential Occupancy Ordinance. The Department of Community Development has proposed the ordinance to improve the quality and safety of Pomona housing. This is a noble goal.

They have attempted this by proposing mandatory inspections of one and two family homes upon each turnover of ownership or occupancy. The object is to insure that all homes conform to all applicable zoning, building, housing, health, and safety codes. This too is a noble goal.

But noble goals aren't always workable solutions. There is no doubt that Pomona has a serious problem with deteriorating housing but will this proposal really help alleviate that condition? Let's analyze two extreme cases to see the likely results of implementing this proposal.

Case 1: This is not Pomona but rather Beverly Hills. We are concerned that many homes have pools constructed without permits that are structurally weak, lack proper fencing and may be cross-connected to water supplies. So we pass an ordinance requiring inspections of all pools upon each ownership turnover. Now some owners while trying to sell their $250,000 homes are informed that they must first spend $2,000 to have their pools upgraded. Without the slightest hesitation each owner initiates the corrective action. The cost of correction is insignificant to the owners and the ordinance works quite well. Some years later, we have no problem with substandard pools.

Case 2: This is not Pomona but rather Tijuana. We are concerned about the overall quality of housing in our city. We have housing and safety codes but most residences stand in utter defiance of these codes. So we pass an ordinance requiring inspections of homes and compliance with all codes before the homes can be sold. Now most owners while trying to sell their $10,000 homes are informed that there are numerous violations and an average of $2,000 must be spent before they will be permitted to sell. Result, Tijuana becomes a ghost town; the owners are forced to abandon their properties because the cost of compliance exceeds their ability to pay. The ordinance failed here; in fact, it made the situation WORSE...

Case 3: This is Pomona, somewhere between Beverly Hills and Tijuana. The question is do we have more in common with Tijuana or Beverly Hills? Can our homeowners bear the cost of compliance with the Residential Occupance Ordinance? I say that the very homes this ordinance is intended to upgrade are the homes owned by people who are just able to make ends meet as it is. Add a $750 roof and a $250 paint job on top of a strained budget and a small equity and you've just broken the camel's back. Who is going to undergo the trauma of selling a house just for the privilege of ending up with less money than he started with? I won't condone anyone shirking their financial obligations but I absolutely abhor propositions that will give them no other choice but to abandon their homes. If it accomplishes anything, this ordinance will make the situation worse.

I hope there are some other poeple who are unwilling to pay the price of additional abandonment for some immeasurably small improvement in zoning, housing aand safety enforcement. I also hope they'll care enough to write or send a clipping of this letter to the Residential Occupancy Study Committee at City Hall.—Ken Altfather, Pomona.

Elective government is on trial

There are only 3 million farmers left in the United States. In Washington, where the name of the game is "numbers," farmers now have so little clout they have to look out for themselves.

There are only 3 million active military men in the United States. Official Washington doesn't seem to care much about them, either. Even less about those retired.

A military man with 20 years service may retire at 50, must retire at 70. If he elects earlier retirement he received a lesser annuity.

Maybe 15,000 employes of the Department of Defense will retire this summer. Fortunately, many of those with administrative experience will accept other jobs in government or industry and we will continue to benefit from the talents in which we and they have a considerable investment.

Yet there are some members of Congress who refer to these warriors who have launched second careers as "double-dippers" and demand that they forfeit part or all of their retirement pay.

Congress, in recent years—penalizing our most capable people with disproportionate taxes and discriminatory restraints—has all but destroyed the incentive to work.

Many uncommon men—who were attracted to military service partly because of retirement pay, a valid part of their compensation—are now available for civilian work.

But some senators—James Abourezk (D-S.D.) is one—imagine that retired military men are cheating the taxpayers if they accept civilian employment.

Sen. Abourezk somehow computes that this practice is costing taxpayers $500 million a year. I do not know if he is taking into consideration in his computation the fact that these working retirees are now able to pay income taxes on their continuing earnings, thus contributing to the Treasury which he accues them of raiding.

But aside from the dollars-and-cents consideration is our public obligation to keep our written promises. These men in no way violated the terms of their military service, nor should we now retroactively abridge their pension rights.

Yet, absurdly unjust as it sound, it's just such picayunish politicking as this which sometimes results in punitive legislation. No member of Congress who has been so generous in handing out our money to the lazy, the indigent and the parasites should suggest that we renege on our obligation to our nation's most capable, most brave, most patriotic Americans.

There is some question these days whether elective government can survive. Not just in the United States but in England, Italy, France and elsewhere, elective government is on trial for its life.

Elected officials, buying votes with promissory notes, are unable to meet their payments. The comparative few taxpayers on whom they depend to finance bread and circuses for the mob aren't sure they want to any more.

RAY CROMLEY

Previewing Ford's economic policies

WASHINGTON — At one time, a younger and perhaps more radical Mr. Ford proposed that the president should sit down with Congress to review the government's ongoing programs, then introduce bills rescinding previously voted appropriations for those activities both agreed did not meet the test of economy.

This was Minority Leader Ford's approach to inflation. Mr. Nixon attempted to achieve this same end by a series of vetoes and by iceboxing appropriations. He failed.

At another time, Mr. Ford backed proposals for creating an independent, bipartisan organization to review the government's programs and budgets on a regular basis. The Hoover-type commission would include members of Congress and the public.

For one, this group was to run a comprehensive review of federal domestic and foreign assistance programs to determine which were overlapping, inefficiently run, unproductive or had outlived usefulness. In 1967, Mr. Ford noted, there were 400 federal aid appropriations for 170 separate assistance programs administered by 21 federal departments and agencies, 150 Washington bureaus and 400 regional offices, each with its own way of passing out federal tax dollars.

The same studies were to determine which new programs should be created and which old ones expanded. Here, Mr. Ford has favored stimulating private capital investment and the creation of jobs by wider and stronger investment credits, accelerated depreciation, a greater stimulus for private industrial research, stronger incentives for employers to hire and train the unskilled and added subsidies for housing when unemployment reached intolerable levels.

To assist these analyses, Mr. Ford favored a five-year projection of all department budgets to determine where government spending programs were heading. First and second-year costs, he believed, were only the thin edge of the wedge.

A man changes when he becomes president, it is said. His past therefore may be no accurate guide. But the major clue we have today on how Mr. Ford will attack unemployment and high prices is what he has proposed or supported vigorously in the past on his own, not as the president's man.

As suggested above, Ford is known to be a bug on budget cutting—spending where you must spend, heavily if you must, but slashing everywhere else, postponing all "good" but not pressingly essential programs.

Alan Greenspan, likely chairman of Mr. Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, likewise holds budget cutting as his top priority. Before he originally agreed to take the job, he exacted a firm Nixon promise to back him up with vetoes, and with major cuts in administration budget proposals.

In all this, Mr. Ford and Greenspan will get enthusiastic support from Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Which is fortunate, because the new President holds firmly to the necessity of a close cooperation with Burns to correlate fiscal and monetary policy. Mr. Ford believes government spending policies (often inflationary) and Federal Reserve policies on credit and money supply (often deflationary) have too often been contradictory. He thinks Burns has been correct in insisting on tight money in the past but that perhaps a little selective easing might be in order.

Just in jest

Did you know—

—that there is 1 dog for every 6.2 humans in the United States?

—that bicycle sales exceeded auto sales in this country last year; and that there are now 75 million two wheelers in use?

—that a fellow has just finished roller skating across the U.S. in 62 days?

—that 20 million people a year in the U.S. sustain injuries from home appliances?

—that because his customers complained about being forced to engage in a lot of idle chatter, a Chicago barber once employed only deaf mutes?

—that according to Dr. Alvarez, a 90 year old doctor and author, "Life is easy if you don't get angry"?

Well then, if you didn't know all that before reading this column, you do now. And if you'll memorize these facts and recite them at the next cocktail party you attend, you can achieve an overnight reputation for being the biggest bore in town.

Reversing the drift of the presidency

Dear Mr. President:

Here follow, despite your understandable reluctance to see recommendations submitted by memo, six pieces of unsolicited advice:

1. After four decades of "imperial democracy," the de-exaltation of the presidency should be your first and continuing order of business. Toward this end, don't hesitate to make a show of reducing the size of the swollen presidential staff. This would serve as substantive as well as symbolic evidence of your intention to reverse the drift toward an all-powerful executive begun under Franklin Roosevelt and carried on, lamentably, through the administration of your immediate predecessor.

Cut the fat off that White House payroll, Mr. President, so that the people can once again see clear through to the Oval Office.

2. Your promise of frequent press conferences as a means of maintaining touch with the country is commendable and refreshing. However, as previously noted in this space, the national capital press corps, for all its self-confidence, isn't necessarily the most formidable group a chief executive can go before in making himself answerable to the public.

But suppose, on your next trip to Capitol Hill, you made yourself available—in the manner of British Prime Ministers—to questions from the people's elected representatives on the floor of Congress?

3. Ever since FDR began taking ships of the U.S. Navy to sea in order to get away from it all, our Presidents have expanded executive perquisite by using taxpayer funds for private purposes. This practice became especially imperial during the past decade, with the development and-or improvement of Hapsburg-like villas at Hyannisport, on the Pedernales, at San Clemente and Key Biscayne.

Conceded, getting out of the pressure cooker at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue is a therapeutic necessity from time to ume. But, Mr. President, don't you think a Grand Rapids boy can manage a vacation trip without dynastic trappings?

4. Call me petry, but this one bugs me, in the pre-Watergate sense. And it's been bugging me for many a year and President. Again, since the advent of Franklin Roosevelt, we've witnessed the glorification of those who've held the presidency, in ways both blatant and subtle. An American President isn't a king or prince but, as our forebears viewed him, simply one of us, elevated to leadership among equals.

That being the case, is it really necessary that we come to associate the appearance of our chief executive at a public gathering with pompous ruffles and flourishes and the adulatory playing of "Hail to the Chief?" What "Chief"? Isn't it impressive enough just to announce, "The President of the United States"—period?

5. Whoever becomes your Vice President, give more than lip service to the principle of making him part of the White House decision-making process. And make sure all your aides understand you clearly on that point.

6. Finally, stick by your declared intention of encouraging direct rather than written communication between your cabinet and yourself. Stay reluctant about memos. And if one of your aides should suggest that you tape anything in the interests of posterity, fire him. On the spot.

Thoughts for today

"Does he thank the servant because he did what was commanded? So you also, when you have done all that is commanded you, say, 'We are unworthy servants; we have only done what was our duty.'" — Luke 17:9, 10.

"A good man and a wise man may, at times, be angry with the world, and at times grieved for it; but no man was ever discontented with the world if he did his duty in it." — Robert Southey, English poet.

Area hospital is accredited by reviewers

Montclair Community Hospital has been accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals, according to Lawrence McCune, administrator.

The accreditation, extending through April 18, 1976, was given after an on-site survey by field representatives of the Joint Commission's Hospital Accreditation Program. It indicates that this facility meets the standards of operation established by JCAH.

Montclair Community Hospital is among approximately 4,900 general hospitals throughout the United States that have earned this recognition. There are about 6,600 general hospitals in the United States.

The Joint Commission's accreditation surveys are voluntary. It is not legally necessary for a hospital to be accredited, but health care facilities have sought accreditation because it represents a benchmark of quality that is higher than governmental licensure alone.

The commission began in 1918 under the auspices of the American College of Surgeons. It was incorporated in 1951 with the support of its member organizations, the American College of Surgeons, the American College of Physicians, the American Hospital Association and the American Medical Association.

The six-week session has a fee of $11. Students may register at the recreation office, 840 N. Indian Hill Blvd.

All classes are sponsored by the Claremont Parks and Recreation Department.

The department will hold a folk dance Thursday at Taylor Hall, 1717 N. Indian Hill Blvd. The doors will open at 7:30 p.m. Cost is 50 cents for the 2½-hour dance. Lisa Geller will instruct the dancers in the final folk dance of the summer.

Many participate in city playground action

La Verne Parks and Recreation Director Ray Kaldenbach has reported that an average of 135 children per day attended schoolground play activities in July.

The greatest participation was at the Roynon School with an average of over 50. The La Verne Heights program drew an average of 45 each day and Grace Miller School, 34.

In the swimming program about 230 beginners took lessons. There were 64 advanced beginners, 47 intermediates, 12 in diving, 44 in junior lifesaving, 40 regular swimming, 24 in swim and trim, and eight in water ballet. The Mommy and Me classes for very small children drew 52.

Eighty-eight families took advantage of the family passes. These 88 families used their passes for a total of 2,402 swims.

There were a total of 3,587 children's passes used during the 10 weeks tallied for June and July. These were outside those assigned to family passes. During the same period 244 adults were counted as users of the pool outside the family passes. There were only two adults who sought beginning swimming lessons this year.

Kaldenbach reported on the interest in the excursions sponsored each week. During the four in July, the Disneyland and Busch Gardens trips each drew 65. About 50 went to the Angel game.

Two are appointed to Pilgrim Place board

Dr. Carl A. Hansen, former minister of the Minnesota Conference of the United Church of Christ, and Joseph C. Hough Hr., dean and professor of Christian ethics of the School of Theology at Claremont, have been named to the board of directors of Pilgrim Place, a religious and cultural center in Claremont where 300 retired Christian workers live.

Mrs. Peter F. Drucker of Claremont was elected to membership on the corporation of Pilgrim Place.

Dr. Hough, associated with the School of Theology since 1965, is an ordained minister of the United Church of Christ.

He received his Ph.D. at Yale University, and is author of the book, "Black Power and White Protestants; A Christian Response to the New Negro Pluralism," and an article, "The Church Alive and Changing," in the Christian Century in 1972.

Dr. Hansen is a resident of Pilgrim Place, and brings to the board his experience on the finance committee and executive council of the National United Church of Christ.

Mrs. Drucker, a native of Cologne, Germany, received an M.S. degree in physics at Fairleigh Dickinson University. She is a member of St. Ambrose Church, Claremont.

Two courses in medicine are offered

A new para-medical program will be offered by allied health services at Chaffey College Sept. 16 through Dec. 6.

The two-course program is designed to prepare students for employment as aides in commercial or hospital medical laboratories, clinics or physicians' offices. Both are four-unit courses.

Class sessions will be conducted from 6:30 to 10:20 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays.

Persons interested in the program are advised to check with the office of admissions for additional data. Registration for the fall quarter is Sept. 4 and 5 and Sept. 10 and 11. The college telephone numbers are 987-1737 or 822-4484.

Handsome old wardrobe

HANDSOME OLD WARDROBE
By Dorothy Hammend

QUESTION: This beautiful old oak wardrobe has been in our family for at least 70 years — possibly more. It stands on 6-inch legs, its overall height is just over 6 feet, the finish is original, and the interior is lined with cedar. And I should include that its full-length beveled mirror is also the original. A tag on the underside of this wardrobe indicates that it was made by Widdicomb Furniture Company of Grand Rapids, Michigan. Any information you can provide about this piece of furniture — including its present value — will be helpful. Mrs. E.L.M.

ANSWER: Your handsome wardrobe is typical of those produced around the turn of the present century, when few homes had built-in closets These pieces were made in a variety of woods and styles, for both apparel and bedding. When in good condition, this type is selling from $200, up to around $275. And it should be noted here that many wardrobes like yours are being converted into fancy china cabnets — simply by replacing the panel sections with glass, and adding shelves to the interior.

QUESTION: I have a variety of Ironstone china pieces that might possibly have some value, even though they are white. Ony one piece is crazed slightly, a 17-inch plater marked Johnson Bros. Other pieces include a 9-inch pitcher marked J & G Meaken, and several soup plates marked Burgess. Mrs. E.H.

ANSWER: White ironstone soup plates in perfect condition usually sell around $5 each, while large platters go for about $20, as well as pitchers the size of yours.

QUESTION: This enclosed drawing shows one of the most unusual old hangers I have seen. It has been made like a coat hanger — possibly a child's as it measures just 8 inches across the upper bar. Attached to this bar are ten heavy pieces of wire that extend down 2½ inches, then have been bent upward — extending two inches. Each prong is quite sharp. Just above the curved position, another horizontal wire has been attached for support, with each of the ends also bent upward.

I found this hanger at an auction of an elderly couple. A family member said it had been used above a stove for hanging utensils. What is your opinion, and what might its value be if it is something special? E.B.

ANSWER: You have a "slab" bacon hanger — not too valuable but collectible as they are scare. Most carry price tags ranging $5-$8, since they are marvelous for displaying small wooden pieces such as spatulas, butter paddles — or a variety of old wooden spoons.

QUESTION: I have a squatty quadruplated plated silver creamer and sugar that I would like to know more about. Mother has told me that these pieces are over 60 years old, but since we have been unable to determine which family member purchased the set they could be much older. Ony a portion of the manufacturer's mark remains, the words "Wilcox Silver Plate" within a circle, with small crossed hammers. Mrs. L.W.C.

ANSWER: The Wilcox Silver Plate Company of Meriden, Connecticut, was organized in 1865 by Jedidiah and Horace Wilcox, and others, for the purpose of making holloware, and was known as the Wilcox Britannia Company. During the year 1867, the name of the firm was changed to Wilcox Silver Plate Company, and in 1869 Wilcox purchased Parker and Casper Company of Meriden. In 1898, the company became part of the International Silver Company.

QUESTION: I am interested in learning the value of several old toys that once belonged to my father. There is one squeek toy, a rubber donkey in very good condition. It stands about 6 inches high. The other are small 4-inch nodding figures — a boy and girl made of porcelain. The slightest movement causes their heads and hands to move. They too are perfect; however, their clothing colors have faded. Mrs. O.N.

ANSWER: Your little Nodders are worth about $25 each, and the rubber donkey around $20

Some new words added to language

By H. D. QUIGG
UPI Senior Editor

NEW YORK (UPI)—Better not tell this to one of your fuddyduddy friends —there might be an explosion —but the word "irregardless" is in the dictionary. Honest.

So is TGIF. This is a useful entry. It's the abbreviation for "Thank God It's Friday."

Among many other included abbreviations are ZPG, "Zero Population Growth," and, if anybody cares, AFPIS — "American Federation of Information Processing Societies." Also, FZS —"Fellow of the Zoological Society."

"Irregardless" finally made it (lexicographers have got to keep up with the language) but it is labeled "substandard." And the definition is: "Irregardless adv (prob. blend of irrespective and regardless) nonstand: Regardless."

These choice items were dredged by a browze through the eighth Webster's New Collegiate Dictionary, published by G. & C. Merriam, the venerable word brokers of Springfield, Mass.

"New," incidentally, is a word hard to resist putting in the title of a dictionary — irregardless of who the publisher is.

You can learn in this new (year-old) book that "Ms." is an abbreviation used "when the marital status of a woman is unknown," that she might be wearing an afro ("having the hair shaped into a round bushy mass") and could possibly be a groupie ("a female fan of a rock group who usually follows the group around on concert tours").

From the world of drugs now comes "smack (origin unknown) slang: Heroin." And "bummer slang: An unpleasant experience (as a bad reaction to a hallucinogenic drug)."

"Language is continually changing," says David R. Replogle, Merriam president, "and never more so than in recent years. Today we are witnessing a groundswell of new movements and new ideas that began in the 1960s. Their contribution to the language has been enormous.

"In other years, new words came from the areas of technology and science and such interests as urban development and ecology. Today they come from young people, from the black experience, fashion and entertainment, sports, and much more."

Among popular new words are "ego trip" —an act that satisfies and enhances one's ego —and "trendy" —very fashionable and up to date.

A "folk mass" is a mass where traditional music is replaced by folk music. A "chopper" is a customized motorcycle. "Juvenocracy" is a state ruled or greatly influenced by youth.

Of ccurse, a "suicide squad" is a special squad used in kickoffs in football. And an "enduro" is a long race stressing endurance rather than speed.

And then there's "splashdown," a new one that already is growing gracefully old. Thank goodness, NASA has had no unpleasant ... ah, well, no bummers.

Overtime pay for National Anthem okayed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hollywood Bowl musicians may receive some overtime pay to play the "Star Spangled Banner" at the start of every concert.

The Board of Supervisors, urged the playing of the national anthem, despite the extra cost Mrs. George S. would incur.

According to Mrs. Behrendt, overtime costs have risen from $30,000 to $50,000 a year during the last five years. She suggested that the anthem be played only on opening and closing nights, the Fourth of July and special occasions.

Yanks in Mexican prisons

Drug-runners feel they got bum raps

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Except for the steel bars, the compact American wing at Lecumberri men's prison almost resembles a U.S. college dormitory. Its designation in Spanish is "Dormitory O."

English echoes along the pink-walled corridor as the "gringos" wander freely and informally from cell to cell talking out their problems under the bored and distant gaze of a few guards.

What the anxious inmates seek with their daily "jailhouse lawyer" conferences are not the answers to some college test paper or final exam, but rather a new legal approach that will help them to get out of the "Black Palace" as Lecumberri is known.

For most of the 68 Yanks held here those chances appear quite dim. Arrested mainly on charges of running narcotics from South America through Mexico for U.S. delivery, they either have already received stiff prison terms or are waiting sentencing. Forty one American women are imprisoned at Los Reyes women's prison on similar charges.

A few claim they are innocent.

But even those seized at Mexico City International Airport with a pound or more of pure cocaine strapped to their bodies insist as do others that they were tortured with cattle prods and beaten immediately after their arrest.

They accuse Mexican customs agents of forcing them to sign exaggerated confessions of guilt, written in Spanish, which they could not understand.

"A three-sentence oral statement somehow turns out to be three pages long by the time they get through embellishing it," one inmate said.

Their most strident charge, however, is that U.S. narcotics agents allegedly operating behind the scenes here are not only directly responsible for their arrests but also in influencing Mexican courts into doling out very tough sentences.

This charge is flatly denied by the U.S. Embassy.

The U.S. embassy said July 24 that the American consulate here as well as in nine other Mexican cities are circulating a pamphlet warning U.S. citizens on the legal dangers of possessing or using narcotics in this country.

"Many Americans mistakenly believe that Mexican laws and enforcement practices are less severe than in the United States," the pamphlet says.

"This is not true....Once a person is arrested on narcotics charges, under Mexican law, he may wait for up to one year before being brought to trial. Judicial handling of narcotics violators is severe.

"Penalties for possession (including marijuana) may result in sentences of up to five years, while trafficking and importation carry sentences of up to 13 years. There is no bail as we know it for narcotics violators."

Announcement of circulation of the pamphlet came in the wake of a 13-day so-called hunger strike, which ended July 22, by the 68 Americans and 7 Canadians held at Lecumberri on narcotics charges and 41 American women held at Los Reyes women's prison.

The strike was in protest against their allegation that U.S. narcotics agents are operating behind the scenes here with the permission of the Mexican government and playing a key role in the current wave of arrests of Americans.

The imprisoned Americans believe that if they had been arrested in the States they probably would receive far easier sentences and possibly only probation in case of a first offense.

The office of the Mexican Attorney General has denied the Americans' charges of torture and brutality.

It has also indirectly denied any American intervention by stating that all persons arrested on narcotics charges are sentenced strictly according to long-prevailing laws.

At Lecumberri the prisoners live in comparative freedom, only subject to a head-count morning and evening.

"You can get anything you want in Lecumberri as long as you can pay for it," one prisoner explained. Most of them receive money from family or friends.

Their cells, housing an average of four men, are comfortable, with desk-like tables and bookcases filled with a wide variety of reading matter. They buy their own food, claiming the prison stable of rice and boiled meat is inedible.

This idle freedom soon turns into anxious boredom, however, compounded by legal battles in which they charge unscrupulous Mexican lawyers with bilking them of thousands of dollars while doing nothing.

Most of the Americans don't deny trafficking in drugs. Here are some of their stories of arrest and imprisonment:

Dean Brown, 32, in "the concert business" in San Francisco, was arrested July 17, 1973, at Mexico City's swankiest hotel shortly after returning from a trip to Bogota with Robin Marie Worthington. She was seized at the airport with a kilo (2.2 pounds) of cocaine. "I wasn't carrying anything but they planted one-half gram of cocaine in my belongings when they searched my room," Brown said. Both were sentenced April 25 to seven-and-a-half years. Brown drove here from Caldifornia in a Rolls Royce. "The judge tried to get it, but I've got it stashed away until I get out."

James Ridley Douglas, of Austin, Texas: "I was carrying half a kilo of coke (cocaine) from Colombia when arrested at the airport here Aug. 30, 1973. The cops said they'd let a girl—Rebecca Jo Ritters, also from Austin—go if I signed a statement, which I did. But they arrested her, too, and we have still not been sentenced. And the cops took half of the coke for themselves. The U.S. government is using us as scapegoats — we're not big time narcotics operators. We want a congressional investigation of the U.S. embassy here."

William (Billy Joe Smith Jr., 28, of Honolulu, a theatrical booking agent, was arrested March 28 at the airport with a friend in the "jewelry business" from Dallas, Tex., who asked not to be identified.

Smith was wearing a girdle containing 28 ounces of cocaine from Colombia which he said he was to deliver in Monterey, Calif. Both men are Vietnam veterans, Smith's friend, 32, who denied any connection with drug smuggling, served two hitches in Vietnam and spent three months in a prisoner of war camp.

Smith: "I was roughed up, slapped around, had a cattle prod in the groin, but I refused to sign my name to any statement. I only printed it which is not legal. I've given a lawyer $8,000 and have seen him only twice, with no results. I've lost my mortgaged house. My wife has had a miscarriage. I have no money. I have no idea when I'll go to trial. I just don't know what to do."

Friend: "They put me in a shower, doused me with water, then started working on me with a cattle prod. I've been a prisoner of war, but I decided these guys were going to kill me, so I signed a confession but later disavowed it. We've been here four months and don't know what's going to happen."

Michael Heinichen, 30, a photographer from Kingsville, Texas, was arrested at the airport with his girl friend, Laura Katzman, coming from Bogota, Colombia. "We had a kilo of cocaine between us. We were sentenced June 15, 1974 to seven and a half years each. She's at Santa Marta.

"We both were coerced into making statements. We weren't allowed to contact the U.S. embassy. We don't speak Spanish. There is no judicial system here. First, when you're arrested, there is no law; then later it's all law. There is no logic. Laura and I are trying to get married. I took three blood tests. On the first two they insisted I had syphilis. Then they said last one came out okay. But the required X-rays and photos have still not come out. This is pretty typical of the way things are."

Dachsie's weakness is in back muscles

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Lucky Buck is our young mirror image replacement for Hansi, a dachshund we had to have put to sleep because of back problems which finally caused complete paralysis. What can we do with this darling baby to be sure he'll never suffer that same terrible fate. We couldn't stand to go through all that again. —R.F.

Dear R.F.: Lucky Buck's luck or lack of it, as far as his back is concerned, is in your hands. True, dachshunds are prone to back problems because the hind legs are further away from the front legs than they are in most other breeds of equal size. The longer the spinal span, the greater the strain. Since you are so painfully aware this susceptibility exists, it should be easier for you to avoid the grave error which most dachsie owners commit, namely overfeeding. Because it's fun to watch a puppy eat, most owners subconsciously (or deliberately) teach the animal to overeat, establishing a lifelong pattern. A roly-poly dachshund puppy is admittedly adorable. It may also be on its way to an early grave from back problems. Good nutrition, especially vital to the growing dog, is never synonymous with overfeeding. When mature, Lucky Buck should be kept definitely on the thin side throughout his life.

Regular exercise to keep muscles (back muscles in particular) toned will help provide the ideal balance of a strong but not overloaded back. With such care, including continued top nutrition, Lucky Buck's back (barring an accident or some inherited defect) should never be a problem.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I add aged water to my aquarium occasionally. This water's usually much colder than the tank water and causes some temperature drop. How much of a difference can there be in temperature without it being dangerous to the fish? —Z.L.

Dear Z.L.: Adding some "old" new water to the tank from time to time is advisable. However, a sudden drop in water temperature of only two degrees can cause trouble with some fish. And a drop of four degrees or more can precipitate shock with most fish. This certainly would counteract the beneficial effects of added water, so it's important the temperatures are close before any water interchange occurs. Even if the fish survives the shock of a lowered water temperature, it will have lowered resistance and be much more susceptible to protozoan, fungal, bacterial and viral infections.

Air attack squad fights brush fires

By JACK V. FOX

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A klaxon breaks the silence with an irritating rasp atop the 4,000-foot peak which overlooks the steep ranges and the vast scoop of basin sweeping to the glittering sea.

Pilot Ted Hellmers breaks into a run toward a poised aircraft. Ten other men pour from a barracks, snatch helmets and yellow jackets and board with paratrooper precision. They are airborne in three minutes.

It has the flavor and drama of a war movie scene of the good guys scrambling for the fighters to knock the Luftwaffe or the Zeros from the skies before they can reach target.

But in this case, they are Los Angeles County firemen, their craft is a single helicopter and the enemy is the dreaded brush fire which at this time of year can be touched off by the spark from a horse's hoof.

They are part of the new "Air Attack" system designed to squelch a blaze in its infancy before wind sweeps it through the oil-filmed chaparral into a roaring firestorm that can denude a mountainside in an afternoon.

Aerial drops on brush fires in inaccessible terrain are, of course, old hat.

The key to this technique, started in 1970, is speed, speed and more speed. For that reason, the men at Camp Nine at the Los Pinetos Station go out on dozens of false alarms and aborts.

"If some housewife telephones and says there is smoke in the brush behind her house we don't ask her any questions, we take off," says Capt. Wally Reed who has been with the department since they were still sliding down stationhouse poles in the 1940s.

"The magic word is 'brush.' It may be that the woman has stomped the fire out with her feet by the time we get there but we don't care. If we can stop one brush fire before it gets away from us, it's worth 50 aborts."

Air Attack has two immediate goals.

—First, get a crew of about 10 men on the ground as close to the incipient blaze as possible so that they can start cutting "breaks" in the underbrush with axes, portable chain saws and shovels whose edges are honed literally to the sharpness of a razor.

—Second, get the helicopter dropping retardant either on the fire itself or on the lines which the ground crews have cut.

The county now has four helicopters, one stationed at each of four posts. Each is equipped to carry a pilot, copilot and 10 men. Below the chopper is a tank with a capacity of 360 gallons of water.

The helicopter has no water in its tank when it first takes off. Its first job is to get the men to the scene and their weight prohibits lifting with a full water tank.

The department has mapped and plotted literally hundreds of "helispots" throughout the mountains where a chopper can put down and immediately fill its tank, either from cisterns or from regular water main hydrants.

As soon as the men are on the ground, the pilot heads for one of those helispots, fills its tanks (in less than two minutes) and can be back on the scene in two more minutes to make the first drop—ideally from a height of about 50 feet.

Shuttling back and forth, the chopper can drop more than 3,000 gallons in an hour.

There are 10 pilots in "Air Attack," all but two of them former military helicopter pilots. They must have at least 4,000 hours in choppers, be under 35 years old and in top physical shape. It is one of the most dangerous jobs in the world.

Flying a helicopter on a calm day over flat terrain is one thing. Piloting it over a brush fire in the mountains, with the smoke blinding your vision, the sudden up and down drafts along the near vertical slopes and getting down close enough to make drops with accuracy to hit a spot the size of a backyard swimming pool is another.

The danger to the men on the ground can be almost as great. A brush fire can race up a mountainside 14 times as fast as it burns down and far faster than any man can run. So the cardinal rule for the ground crew is to make sure they have an avenue of escape. Eight men were killed four years ago when they got above a fire.

Many people in other parts of the country have an impression of Los Angeles as being flat. Actually, one fourth of the county is mountainous and the ranges shoot up suddenly not far north of the downtown area.

There are magnificent homes on the steep hillsides and in the canyons. They and their occupants, of course, are the first responsibilities of the firefighters and they do a remarkably successful job.

Other areas are barren of homes or any other structures.

"I've heard people ask why there is such an urgency to put out fires in those areas—why don't we just let them burn to the top," Reed said.

The fact is, he points out, that if the slopes are denuded of any vegetation they become subject to another California menace when the few weeks of torrential rains come every January or February.

It results in mudslides, which in the past years have crushed dozens of homes, and in water running unimpeded down the slopes into the canyons where there are flash floods.

"That's one thing a lot of people don't understand," Reed said. "You put out fires to prevent floods."

Party, state bodies fused in Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania (UPI) — President Nicolae Ceausescu, who has led his country along a foreign policy path independent of other Warsaw Pact nations, also is becoming less orthodox on the internal front.

Recent government and constitutional changes took further the process of combining party and state bodies which Ceausescu has been encouraging in the last four years.

Although in other respects Romania's internal policy remains that of a highly orthodox and tightly run Soviet satellite, the fusion of some state and party functions represents a major departure from conventional Eastern European Communist systems, Western diplomats said.

"It's difficult to know how far Romania will go with this. But certainly the recent changes mark Romania out from other Eastern European countries where party and state are more or less distinct although, of course, the party always leads the way," one diplomat said.

One area where party and state have come together is in Ceausescu himself, who remains secretary-general of the party but also has considerable control over government in his newly created office of President of the Republic. As president he even has the right to sit on the Council on Ministers.

"This means in effect that Ceausescu can now sign anything he likes after consulting with senior party members and then just pass it on to the government for action. He has short-circuited the representative bodies of state—the State Council and the Grand National Assembly," the diplomat said.

Party sources said this and other changes would pave the way for a more modern and flexible administration by eliminating red tape and speeding up the business of government.

Ceausescu often has complained that too little work was being done because of "parallelism"—the need for measures to be passed by both the party and the state apparatus before they could be implemented.

A further intermeshing of state and party functions has been achieved by scrapping the politburo (party policy-making body). This leaves as the senior party body the executive committee, which usually includes some senior members of the administration.

To replace the politburo Ceausescu has created a permanent bureau of the central committee which is to be a party-state body.

Ceausescu led up to these changes over the past few years by creating joint consultative bodies at the lower levels and by regularly rotating personnel between party and state positions.

Similar cross-fertilization has been encouraged in the provinces although there has been some resistance from bureaucrats with comfortable jobs who disliked coming so closely under party scrutiny.

One result has been to force some qualified technicians and agronomists with easy Bucharest-based positions out into the country and industrial areas to apply their knowledge.

"If this state-party fusion cuts down paperwork, achieves more efficient implementation of policy and reduces bureaucratic inertia, that will be progress," a Western diplomat said. "But on the debit side it can increase the Big Brother all-pervasiveness of the party far more than before."

End foreseen to scramble on cable cars

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Another San Francisco tradition —the mad scramble to board cable cars at the Market Street turntable — will vanish if Municipal Railway executives have their way.

For years passengers have scrambled and pushed their way aboard as soon as the cars were pushed off the turntable for their climb half way to the stars.

But queues have been established which presumably will give children and the aging as much of a chance as the young and boisterous to get aboard.

The lines—one for the trip to Fisherman's Wharf and the other for the trip to the Hyde Street Pier—held back passengers for from 15 to 20 minutes.

Norman Langridge, turntable starter, lamented that "it'll take some of the excitement out of cable caring."

After decade of war, Vientiane hasn't changed much

VIENTIANE, Laos (UPI) — A foreigner who lived in this sleepy capital on the banks of the Mekong River in the 1950s returned recently and was asked what changes he noticed.

"I guess the most remarkable thing is that, really, almost nothing has changed," he said.

In the intervening years Laos has experienced the second Indochina war, 10 years of American bombing in its hinterlands, three coalition governments with the Communist Pathet Lao, and four coups or attempted coups. The crises have done little to disturb the languid pace of life here.

A mountain kingdom that was carved out of the western flank of Indochina by the French, Laos remains Southeast Asia's least developed country. Ethnic Laotians comprise less than half of a total population of possibly 3.5 million, with tough hill people of various tribes making up most of the rest.

In an age when other Asian cities are going through economic booms and building skyscrapers, Vientiane is one of a few remaining capitals that are out of the pages of Graham Greene.

The town, with 176,000 inhabitants, is a sun-baked collection of wooden shacks and red tile-roofed colonial buildings that stretch along two narrow main streets with open drains.

Sleeping dogs dot the sidewalks. Foreigners who live here joke that about the only thing that occurs on time in Vientiane is the daily siesta. Practically all activity lapses at noon and does not resume until three.

Underneath the tranquil surface, however, long-time residents of Vientiane do see significant changes. The country's third coalition government since 1957 was formed last April 5, and before he was stricken by a heart attack in mid-July, neutralist Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma had been performing a delicate balancing act trying to get Communists and non-Communists to work together.

Most of the Americans who conducted the so-called "secret war" in Laos have picked up and left. They included paramilitary advisers who armed, paid and organized guerrilla troops to fight the war. They also included highly paid pilots of Air America, the charter arline that flew for the CIA.

Villas rented to the Americans by military officers and businessmen now stand vacant, and night life at the bars and night clubs which catered to them is languishing.

The departure of Air America alone took an estimated $4 million a year in salaries of Laotian employes and local purchases out of the town's economy. The total impact of the U.S. cutback has not been fully determined at a time when Vientiane has been caught in the worldwide inflationary squeeze.

Communist Pathet Lao troops in baggy green uniforms and caps now patrol the streets with government police. There are a total of about 2,000 armed Pathet Lao in Vientiane, both as police and security forces for Communist ministers in the government.

In an incident that many people here see as a sign of the times, a retired American pilot was arrested by the joint police last month for shooting a bandit who tried to hold him up as the American was leaving a restaurant he owns.

Pathet Lao police officers charged he was an American military officer in disguise. The restaurant owner is still languishing in jail. The regular police were unable to release him because peace protocols required all decisions to be made unanimously by the two sides.

The Pathet Lao police also broke up an attempt by rightists to get names on a petition to prevent the dissolution of the National Assembly by the coalition. Souvanna backed the Pathet Lao in order to maintain a fragile peace.

Vientiane's university students, formerly regarded as docile and non-political, are starting to take a page from young people in other Asian countries who have been exerting political power.

Earlier this year they staged protests against rising living costs, blaming Souvana's government. They have also announced plans for demonstrations against the Pathet Lao to protest the presence of North Vietnamese troops in Laos.

Pathet Lao ministers in the coalition, who for years lived in austere caves in remote jungles, have quickly developed tastes for air conditioners and scotch whisky since arriving in Vientiane.

Some Laotians voice hopes that the comforts of the big city, Vientiane style, will make the Pathet Lao easier to deal with. But other Laotian observers point out that the most senior men in the movement stayed behind in the caves, and that their policy pronouncements seem as hard-line as ever.

The lighter side

Safety belt council wages an uphill battle

By DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Safety Belt Council currently is waging an uphill fight against mandatory instalaltion of air bags in automobiles.

The thing that makes the fight uphill is the fact that air bags inflate automatically whereas seat belts offer no protection unless buckled beforehand.

The council argues that if everyone buckled up there would be no need for air bags, which will cost about $300. It says "Congress should encourage states to enact safety belt use laws."

"Belt use laws in Australia increased wearing from 20-25 per cent to 80-85 per cent," it reports.

While the Council's objectives may be laudable, its means of obtaining those ends have certain weaknesses.

Resistance to lap and shoulder straps has persisted despite devices that make squawking noises or keep the car from starting when the belts aren't buckled.

And the Australian experience suggests that 15 to 20 per cent of the people would even break the law to avoid buckling up.

All things considered, I think the safety belt industry would do well to forget about trying the lick the problem through legislation and adopt the air bag approach instead.

In other words, it should concentrate on developing safety belts that would buckle automatically in event of a crash.

I know an inventor, Wally Fiddleworth, who is already working on that principle. It isn't quite perfected yet, but Basically, it involves installing a large glass tank behind the front seat of a car.

"What's that thing in the tank?" I asked the other day when Fiddleworth invited me to test the system.

"It's an octopus," he cried triumphantly.

The tank is designed to shatter instantly when the car is involved in a collision, he explained.

any day now he may be ready to apply for a patent.

Theater phantom finally trapped

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Miss Phantom stepped into a baited trap in the city's new theater Tuesday, ending the Calico cat's lengthy career as a prowler.

Miss Phantom had lurked in the hall several months before the building was opened to the public in June.

Five unusual women

Cope with traditional obstacles to overcome numerous problems

(Editor's Note: As more and more women reassess their lives, they face problems and challenges of transition. How do they select roles offering greater fulfillment? How can they reconcile the needs of husbands and families with the demands of professional lives? What adjustments must be made on the way up? This is the first in a series of stories about five mature women from different parts of the country who are successfully coping with traditional obstacles und have become achievers.)

NEW YORK (MW) — As the saucy Lola in "Damn Yankees!" Gwen Verdon captured Broadway and Hollywood 19 years ago. Today she's proving that a mature woman can still play the femme fatale who gets whatever she wants.

"I'm only aware of the passage of time when I look at my children," exclaims the energetic redhead between performances of the musical on the summer circuit. Her son, born when she was 16, is an actor and x-ray technician who has two children of his own. Her daughter Nicole Providence Fosse is 11, the offspring of her second marriage to award-winning choreographer-director Bob Fosse.

But Gwen Verdon does not take her trim figure for granted. "I stay in shape. I'd be afraid not to. Only when you're young can you let go and then get back into it very quickly."

Forty-five minutes are spent each morning stretching, bending, moving—"sometimes to erotic music I had specially written for me." She maintains it's no effort. "To me exercise is like taking a shower. It wakes me up." She calls the exercises. "body mechanics," claiming they help "discipline your body and make it strong."

She has taken her exercises to college workshops around the country, teaching dance and physical education instructors how to move their bodies properly. "I was appalled at the way dance was being taught," she recalls, "if I hadn't danced, I'd have wanted a career in education." A combination of economics, luck, and of course, talent pushed her into professional dancing.

"I grew up in Hollywood. My father was a film lighting technician and my mother a dancer. But I had every intention of being a publicist. I'd race around collecting news items, getting $10 from Louella Parsons or $5 from Jimmy Fiddler. But by 18 my marriage was breaking up, and $55 a week was not enough to support my son and myself."

So Gwen Verdon, who had studied dance, was hired by Hollywood choregrapher Jack Cole to tour with his troupe. "In seven years with him he taught us much more than dance," she remembers fondly. "He took us to museums, taught us aesthetics and anatomy, and introduced us to writers and other people in the arts. Working for him was like a college education."

Another dance master who influenced her life was Bob Fosse. "He's the creative one," she says of the man who choreographed "Damn Yankees!" and "Sweet Charity" for her. Insisting "I'm not creative—but I am terrific doing what people tell me to do," she discloses she'll work with her ex-husband this fall in a new musical, "Chicago." Despite their divorce they team well professionally.

The performer is convinced her daughter has inherited her father's creative genes. "Nicole paints beautifully and is very theatrical. She has flaboyance and flair." Mother and daughter have always been close. "When Nicole was three months old, I was doing a television show in California but living in New York. We traveled back and forth, often staying at hotels. "In fact," says Gwen Verdon, "the first two-syllable word Nicole uttered was 'bellboy'!"

In her soft breathy voice, Gwen Verdon explains she can keep up with dancers half her age by pacing herself. "I know when to take it easy and when to sit down. The younger one may think sitting is what age does to you—but when I get up I still do the same dances they do!"

Early in her dancing career someone condescendingly referred to her as "a chorus girl." She never forgot the hurt and indignation. "From that moment on I was determined to be the best at what I could do." Obviously she is fulfilling that promise to herself—and to everyone else.

READY FOR FIESTA

Mrs. Robert Gottier and Mrs. Robert Scheffler view the setting for the Wives of Professional Engineers annual fiesta as they try a preview picnic at Adobe de Palomares, scene of the Saturday dinner.

Fiesta set by women Saturday

The Adobe de Palomares will be the setting for the annual fiesta planned by the Wives of Professional Engineers Saturday evening.

The early California background will enhance the fiesta plans which call for decorating with pinatas, balloons and paper streamers. Mrs. Cornelius Van Dam is in charge of plans for the 6:30 p.m. event.

The fiesta will be open to members of the East San Gabriel Valley Chapter of the California Society of Professional Engineers and their guests. Reservations are to be made with Mrs. Robert L. Gottier, 629-4732, by Monday.

President of the group this year is Mrs. William Gelling. Other officers are: Mmes. Van Dam, recording secretary; Bob Roberson, corresponding secretary; Robert Schiffler, treasurer; Leland King, Delmar Walters and Edwin Williams, board of directors.

Miniskirts on decline

By GAY PAULEY

The miniskirt is dead, say many fashion experts in Paris, Rome, London and New York. But, devotees are fighting back.

The minis epitaph seemed to be written in London, where the short, short skirt orignated 10 years ago, when the C and A group of clothing stores, which sold 18,000 minis a day at the height of the fashion, said the style was finished.

"No way," said a typical male, Mike Timko, 20, in San Francisco.

"I don't believe hemlines will go down," said Sharon Alwart, 30, of Appleton, Wis., a secretary visiting New York. "Too many American women are too free in their ideas. They'll wear what they like. American women are more liberated than other women."

Lucille Richards, a clothing store owner in New York, said she doubted the longer skirts would be popular because they are "just not a flattering length for most women. They're ugly."

In U.S. cities and resorts, the mini seemed very much alive, at least for the summer. It may be the last gasp.

This year's fall and winter collections from Paris, Rome and New York definitely drop the hemlines below the knee. UPI Correspondent Aline Mosby in Paris reported that French girls hardly ever wear minis now, although Scandinavian and German girls do.

"I haven't been able to sell a mini in over a year," said the operator of a Chicago women's apparel shop which caters to women from 18 to 85.

"The length now is right around the knees. I bought some calf-length (midcalf) for fashion items only, but I expect they will be shortened to the knee before they sell."

Paris designers stopped doing minis two or three years ago. The only designer bucking the longer hemline trend is Andre Courreges.

"I always have liked the short look," said Courreges, whose hemlines rest at the top of the knee in his new collection. "It's younger."

Courreges doesn't have any minis for fall and winter but he does not include midcalf hemlines either.

"Long skirts are here but actually this doesn't mean the mini is dead," said Patricia McColl, who is based in Paris with Women's Wear Daily.

Children's Bureau statistics

Battered youth-national disgrace

NEW YORK (UPI) — We read their sad stories in the newspapers. We wonder what impels the parent who with unbelievable cruelty abuses the child. And we wonder what can be done for the children and also to rehabilitate the parents.

Much is being accomplished through legislation and the courts, by the medical profession, by volunteer groups offering aid, and by parents themselves who realize their trouble. Even so, the problem grows.

Conservatively, the U.S. Children's Bureau places the annual incidence at about 50,000 to 75,000 cases.

In a 1973 report for the American Association, Dr. Fontana, a leading authority on the problem, speculated that if the present pattern of increase continues, during the next five to 10 years, doctors can expect to be confronted with at least 1.5 million cases of suspected maltreatment.

Among them will be an estimated 50,000 deaths attributed to battering and 300,000 children permanently injured physically or emotionally.

Dr. Fontana says that child battering had become an "insidious epidemic". He believes it is "probably the most common cause of death among children today, outnumbering those due to any of the infectious diseases, leukemia, and automobile accidents . . . it is a national disgrace."

The "national disgrace" of the battered child is examined in depth in a new publication from the Public Affairs Committee, Inc., a nonprofit educational organization, with headquarters in New York.

The author of "To Combat Child Abuse and Neglect" is Theodore Irwin who writes extensively on health and social problems.

Irwin explores the causes, finding that most child battering is done by apparently "normal" people in a critical period, that even among serious cases of abuse, less than 10 per cent of the parents are found to be alcoholic or emotionally disturbed or mentally ill.

"Generally," he writes, "abusive parents strike out in rage, resentment or sheer ignorance."

Maltreatment often has been traced to compulsive disciplinarians, he says. It's the old "spare the rod and spoil the child" dictum.

But an impelling factor lies in the upbringing of the parents themselves. Many were reared in homes where beating children was a common practice so they repeat the cycle.

One authority, Dr. Eli H. Newberger, reports that most abusive parents appear to be overwhelmed by their own environment and strains that make them lash out at children.

On the legal front of prevention, all 50 states now require medical practitioners to report to appropriate authorities suspected cases of child abuse or glaring neglect.

Then there comes the controversial issue—the right of parents to rear their children as they see fit, versus the right of a child to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Irwin describes some new approaches on the community level. He finds less emphasis on placing abused youngsters in foster homes and more on helping parents cope. "Obviously," he writes, "educating parents about child development and child rearing can help avert abuse and dangerous neglect.

"So can decent housing, medical care, jobs, whatever nurtures a healthy family."

Irwin concludes that "the vicious cycle of child abuse and neglect from generation to generation must be broken. In the long run, that can be accomplished only if treatment of the abusive parent is coupled with efforts to improve the conditions—social, economic, psychological — underlying the problem."

Editor's Note: A copy of "To Combat Child Abuse and Neglect" is available for 35 cents from the Public Affairs Committee, 381 Park Ave., S, New York, N.Y. 10016.

THE WINTER LOOK

Black and female power in public life is moving ahead at all levels

By PATRICIA McCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — You've heard of Shirley Chisholm, the Democratic Congresswoman from New York, whose name was placed in presidential nomination at the Democratic National Convention last time around.

You've heard over television recently another black and female congresswoman, Rep. Barbara Jordan from Texas. You saw and heard her during broadcasts of the House Judiciary Committee's Watergate and/or impeachment debate.

The two are just the tip of the iceberg. Black and female power in public life is moving ahead at local, state and national levels.

The Washington-based Joint Center for Political Studies in a national survey counts 337 black women in elective office —from municipal judges and school board members to members of congress. Compared with the total number of election offices, 520,000, it's tiny. But it is a 160 per cent increase over the number of black women in elective office in 1969.

Dr. Ethel Allen is a surgeon and Philadelphia City Council woman. She enjoys telling people she ran on the platform -"Fat, Black and Intelligent." Her philosophy for black females: "You should never apologize for three things: being black, being female, and being able to do the job."

Emma Darnell, a lawyer, is Commissioner of the Department of Administrative Services for the city of Atlanta. Her staff numbers 200. Her budget for purchasing: $60 million.

Jewel Lafontant is Deputy Solicitor General in the Department of Justice; Connie Newman is one of five commissioners of the Federal Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Black females in business and public life were hailed when C. DeLores Tucker, also black and female, spoke to her achieving sisters a little while back.

She is Secretary of State for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania—third biggest job there.

Using an oratorical style reminiscent of an old-fashioned black preacher, she fired off the verbal salutes at a lunch in the Hunt Room (once a male enclave) at the Twenty-One Club in New York.

Mrs. Tucker was among the black male achievers honored by host Earl Graves, publisher of Black Enterprize magazine. The current issue is devoted to black women high achievers in business and public life.

Mrs. Tucker, who has a very regal bearing, rolled her R's and fixed her audience with voice as well as stares during grand pauses.

She drew the most "amen, sister" when she said achievements of black females remind her of what a black woman long ago said when she was freed from slavery. To wit:

"I feel so tall...within me I feel the power of the nation."

"Many of you," she said, "have infiltrated the halls of the kings of business, industry, education, government.

"Many of you are in the position to bring influence to bear — if you have the courage of Esther who could say —"I will go in unto the king, which is not according to the law and if I perish: I perish.

"Esther knew what seven million black women must learn—that power is always there, waiting to be used; and if you don't use it for good, someone else will seize it for evil!"

She reminded the key women in key places that "the function of a key is to open locks."

"Key people unlock doors but we cannot stop at this roster of noted achievers. There are seven million other black women of voting age in this nation today — anonymous women, unknown and unsung— who are also key women in key places. Key to the family, key to the community and key to the future of Black America."

Mrs. Tucker urged the honored women to help black children to a dose of pride in themselves and hope to bring forth the best that is in each.

"For whatever warps and twists one child, warps and twists our whole society."

"We need to educate our children that black ain't beautiful when it's dumb! We must add another B—for brains."

Other women saluted included:

—Ernesta Procope. Out of the pockets of poverty that cover much of Bedford-Stuyvesant in New York, she has fashioned a $8.2 million insurance brokerage business.

—Shirley Jackson, Theoretical Physics Group, Fermi National Laboratory, Chicago, Ill.

—Harriet Michel, executive director of New York Foundation, with a budget in excess of $20 million.

—Joan Murray, former television newsgal. Executive vice president and director of public relations, Zebra Associates, New York.

—Ethel Payne, associate editor, Sengstacke Newspapers, Chicago.

—Christine Philpot Clark, an attorney at CBS Inc. She also is an author. Among her books is "How to Get Along With Black People."

Auxiliary presents gift to assist handicapped

A gift of $10,000, proceeds from the Casa Colina Hospital Auxiliary's charitable endeavors in the past year, has been presented by the auxiliary president, Mrs. Robert A. Keith and Mrs. Robert Wills, co-manager of the hospital's boutique gift shop, to Dale E. Eazell, executive vice president of the hospital.

The funds represent community contributions and the volunteer efforts of 65 auxiliary members in benefit fashion shows, a bazaar, the boutique gift shop on the hospital grounds, and the first annual Casa Colina-Pacific Coast Walking Horse Association benefit horse show.

Auxiliary contributions aid in the operation of the therapeutic preschool for handicapped children as well as other rehabilitation programs for the disabled and in the purchase of specialized equipment needs.

Other officers, in addition to Mrs. Keith, who were recently installed by Mrs. T. Paul Blanshard are: Mmes. Milo G. Lacy, vice president; Roy L. Anderson, recording secretary; H. E. Bickerdike, treasurer; and V. Rojansky, corresponding secretary.

Committee chairmen for the new year are: Mmes. Stephen Goldwater, membership; Ernest Mock and Robert Wills, boutique gift shop; W. A Schmall, boutique scheduling; Jack Hoxsey, liaison to board of directors; Jerry Laws, publicity; Richard Anderson, hospitality; Robert Berryman, telephone; T. A. Mitchell, special events; R.W. Headland, addressing; Kenneth Perry, bridge marathon; Herbert Johnson, speakers' bureau; and Miss Adelia Hallock and Miss Marianna Hallock, Christmas cards.

Membership in the auxiliary is open to women of all ages who are interested in active volunteer service.

The second benefit horse show, to be expanded to a two-day event, will be held March 15-16, 1975, at the Los Angeles County Fairgrounds.

Nine fashion shows have been arranged with clubs and organizations in the area for the fall season. Groups interested in a fashion show or program regarding Casa Colina are urged to contact Mrs. Robert Wills, 593-1336, at an early date.

MRS. THOMAS MASSEY IV

At double-ring rites read by the Rev. James K. Thomann in Trinity United Methodist Church marriage vows were exchanged between Miss Elizabeth Marie Wenker and Thomas Laney Massey IV.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.V. Wenker, Claremont, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Laney Massey III, Huntington Beach.

Given in marriage by her uncle, William R. Hotaling, the bride chose a gown designed and made by her sister, Mrs. Victor D. Holman of Monrovia. It was fashioned of champagne satin trimmed with re-embroidered Belgian lace appliqued with pearls. The chiffon sleeves were puffed and ended in deep lace cuffs at the wrists. The bride carried miniature white roses and yellow daisies.

After a reception at the home of the bride's parents the couple left for San Franciso. They will make their home in Garden Grove.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were the grandmother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Magdalana Justel of Vienna, Austria, and Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Snyder of Connecticut.

Line draperies

The Decorative Fabrics Association of America makes some very important "how to care for" points. Draperies should be lined, and even interlined. Window shades should be drawn during the day for protection from the sun. Surprisingly, the Association states that winter sun and reflection from the snow are even more harmful to fabrics than the summer sun.

New motorcycle club for married couples

PLEASANT HILL, Calif. (UPI) — From a distance the jackets look familiar. They are leather. Some are black. Some have set-in patches with pictures of motorcycles.

But instead of names like Hell's Angeles, Gypsy Jokers, Coffin Cheaters or Satan's Slaves, they bear non-sinister appellations such as Kings and Queens, Lucky Few, Drifters and Wedded Wheels.

And unlike the burly, bearded members of so-called outlaw motorcycle gangs who cruise on stripped-down, souped-up choppers with only the wind racing through their long locks, these other motorcycle buffs ride on full-dress machines wearing safety helmets.

"Groups like ours are trying to establish motorcycling as a clean sport," says Bob Cope, past president of Wedded Wheels. "Family motorcycling is similar to going out for a day of tennis or golf or bowling. It is a normal, enjoyable recreational activity."

The Wedded Wheels, which has about 40 members ranging in age from 18 to 60, was founded in 1969 by husbands and wives who wish to motorcycle together. Members take to the country lanes and highways for days at a time, often with their children in sidecars, for, in Cope's words, "pleasure and distance and scenery."

Sometimes the rides end in campouts, with wiener roasts and campfire songs. Sometimes there are abalone feeds, and recently the Wedded Wheels hosted a poker run for other road rider groups in which motorcyclists stopped at check points along a route, drawing a playing card at each stop.

But Cope, a parts manager for an auto imports service who rides above a license plate reading, "Smile, Jesus Saves," says the best part is just being outdoors.

"There's a unique closeness to nature," he says. "On a cycle you can enjoy terrain and climatic variations 100 per cent more than you can in an automobile.

"There's a feeling of nearness to the landscape, to the elements that is almost unexplainable—and that's what I think impresses the seasoned, experienced road rider."

Wedded Wheels members belong to the American Motorcycle Association (AMA), a requirement which Cope believes has kept the club wholesome and family-oriented. He said that at a recent motorcycle tour, one of the biggest on the West Coast, laxity in enforcing AMA card requirements led to drugs, shootings and deaths.

As one Wedded Wheels guest put it, "You don't want to take your children to something like that."

Cope also boasts that women have "100 per cent say on all subjects" in the club that they are encouraged to ride alone.

"We feel real proud when one of our women rides down the highway on her own motorcycle," he says.

Dolores Monington, a motorcycle pilot and member of the club, agrees. "Once you ride by yourself, you don't enjoy riding behind your husband so much."

Frantic donor recovers cash

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI) — A 26-year-old man here almost gave a lot more to the Salvation Army than he intended. Only after he had deposited some used clothing in a drop box did he discover he left $3,600 in cash in the pockets of one pair.

"He was wringing his hands when I showed up," said Maj. David Riley, Salvation Army center director, who dispatched a soldier to search the box when the frantic donor called.

"He nearly fainted when we told him we found the money. He told us he would have lost his business if the money had not been recovered," Riley said.

Backstairs at the White House

Richard Nixon's anguished fall from power

By HELEN THOMAS
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON — The full and accurate story of President Richard M. Nixon's anguished fall from power has yet to be told. It may be a long time before all the facts are known.

White House chief of staff Alexander M. Haig and Nixon's press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler were the only eye witnesses and active participants who saw Nixon daily during the two-week ordeal. Haig helped Nixon face up to the decision he had to make.

The beginning of the end came when Nixon was forced to make public three June 23, 1972, taped conversations with then-chief of staff H.R. Haldeman which showed that Nixon authorized the Watergate cover-up.

Nixon thought the storm that followed would subside. While he expected to lose the impeachment vote in the House, as late as five days before he resigned he still felt he had a chance to survive a Senate trial.

According to sources, Ziegler told Nixon over and over again that it would "all blow over." The sources said Haig was much more realistic and found Nixon's survival chances hopeless.

Haig has read several versions of the "five days in August" and says some details are correct. But his role, he believes, has not been properly portrayed. He is disturbed he has been pictured as administering the final blow that made Nixon realize he had to resign.

Haig says Nixon made up his own mind.

In the last analysis Nixon, who always wanted options, had none.

In the end, Haig's view was reinforced by three Republican congressional leaders who told Nixon his case was hopeless.

The inside story of how Nixon listened to the tapes, his private feelings and his search for a way to avoid resignation may be revealed in the memoirs of his close aides.

As it was, Nixon was almost routed out of the White House although Haig and other Nixon men strived mightily to give him the most graceful exit possible under the circumstances.

Nixon met with 26 old friends from Capitol Hill to tell them he was quitting because he knew the nation needed more than a "half President." In those sentimental surroundings, Nixon broke down and wept. His staff was shattered. He had to be led out of the room as many of his old friends cried.

According to his former aides, Nixon probably will write his memoirs and focus on his private conversations with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev during the first summit meeting.

Nixon had many meetings with Brezhnev where the only other person in the room was a Russian interpreter. During the trip to Moscow last June even Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was not privy to the secret talks.

Aides say that Nixon needs a long rest, to find himself again and to sort out his future.

White House reporters did not know why they were locked in the press center for 20 minutes during the evening about three hours before Nixon delivered his resignation broadcast. Some feared something had happened to Nixon. Apparently the White House police and Secret Service were granting to Nixon's wish to walk the White House grounds in private, drinking in the surroundings for the last time. It was reported that 200 members of his staff also were locked in the White House for that period.

Her face told the story as she stood on the platform the Friday morning when Nixon delivered his farewell to his cabinet and staff. Her eyes were almost shut and her expression was tense. She looked stricken as Nixon began his emotional, tear-filled poignant remarks during his last hour in the White House.

Mrs. Nixon has never looked more devastated except when her husband was defeated by John F. Kennedy in the 1960 election. She later said she had cried for all the people who had worked so hard for her husband.

A few months after that personal tragedy, 14 years ago, Mrs. Nixon perked up.

"I'm beginning to live again," she told her friends.

President Ford is expected to stay close to Washington during his initiation period and his aides do not expect him to set up another White House in another part of the country — not now at least —as did his predecessor.

The Fords have a condominium at Vale, Colo. where they have spent the Christmas holiday for many years.

Nixon had hoped to be the first American President to travel to Japan and he postponed it several times this year. His last projected schedule was to visit Toyko after Labor Day. As Vice President he had seen Dwight D. Eisenhower cancel a trip to Japan after Eisenhower's advance men urged against it because of possible leftist violence.

Now Ford will make the trip, probably before the end of the year.

Pat Nixon has told friends she is still "numb" over the catastrophic events that led to her husband's resignation.

Only a few months before she had told an interviewer that "I trust my husband. I know he is telling the truth."

Struggling Dodgers lose again, 4-3

By BILL LANGELY
P-B Sports Editor

PITTSBURGH — The Dodger clubhouse was silent after Saturday's loss. Not even a whisper could be heard. Heads were down and an appropirate song, "Born to lose," could be heard on the radio.

The Dodgers' spirits are at a season low after they lost their fifth consecutive game here Saturday afternoon in what was the toughest defeat during the current losing streak.

Los Angeles broke out of its hitting woes by piling up 11 hits, including four doubles, against the Pirates but it wasn't enough as the red-hot Bucs enjoyed a 4-3 victory.

The way the Dodgers went down to defeat was especially frustrating.

Singles by Steve Yeager and pinch-hitter Ken McMullen put Dodgers on first and third bases in the ninth inning with only one out to knock out starter Jerry Reuss.

Dave Giusti came out of the bullpen to face Bill Russell. But Dodger skipper Walt Alston countered by sending lefthanded Bill Buckner up to pinch hit.

Giusti immediately got ahead 0-2 against Buckner but the Dodger pinch-hitter made the reliever work by fouling off several pitches. Buckner finally got his pitch and hit a hard grounder to shortstop Frank Traveras who started a game-ending double play.

"We hit the ball harder today than they did, but ours weren't as timely," Alston said. "I wish Buckner wouldn't have hit it quite so hard."

Dodger bats have been quiet recently as L.A. has dropped eight of its last 10 games. They haven't hit a home run in a week, being stalled on the 99 figure. And L.A. no longer leads the National League in hitting with Pittsburgh moving past them.

"One thing which is killing our offense is the inability of Davy Lopes getting on base," Alston said.

Lopes is currently battling an 0-14 slump.

Yeager snapped his 0-19 string by pounding out three hits Saturday including a double in the second inning to knock in Tom Paciorek for the first run.

Pittsburgh tied it in the fourth when Richie Hebner hit a fluke double down the left field line, advancing to third on Andy Messersmith's wild pitch and coming home on Al Oliver's grounder to second.

The Dodgers scored two runs in the sixth to go ahead 3-1. Steve Garvey opened with a double and Ron Cey followed with a solid single for his 78th run-batted-in.

After two outs, Yeager singled up the middle to send Paciorek to third. Messersmith, who had two hits in the game, caught the Pirate infield back by putting down a perfect bunt for a single to bring Paciorek home.

"Messersmith was on his own," Alston reported. "He can do that pretty well. The way things have gone lately our pitchers have been our best hitters."

But Messersmith (13-5) couldn't hold the lead as he lost his third straight decision.

The Bucs didn't waste any time in tying it in their half of the sixth. Messersmith got himself into trouble by walking Hebner and Willie Stargell. Richie Zisk singled to score Hebner and Manny Sanguillen followed with a double off Paciore's glove to bring Stargell home. But Zisk was out at the plate trying for the go-ahead score.

Pittsburgh won it in the eighth.

Hebner slammed Messersmith's first-pitch to right for a double. Oliver followed with a single just beyond Lopes' reach to knock in the winning run.

Mike Marshall relieved Messersmith for his 80th appearance of the season to stop any further damage. The Dodger managed 11 hits while Reuss was able to pick up his 13th victory.

"Base on balls have cost us in recent games," Alston said, in referring to the two runs in the sixth. "When people talk about our troubles, they don't take into consideration how hot the other teams are."

For instance, the Pirates have won 10 of their last 12 games and 24 of their last 34.

DODGER DATA — Geoff Zahn (2-2) will face rookie righthander Larry Demery (3-4) in this morning's 10:35 a.m. (PDT) contest. KTTV-TV channel 11 will be telecasting the action. . .The Dodgers will be happy to say good-bye to Three Rivers Stadium, where they are 0-5 this season. They open a three-game series in Chicago Monday afternoon with Al Downing listed as the probable with Doug Rau being scratched because of his blister problem. . .Oliver extended his hitting streak to 12 games while Zisk is up to 11. . . Joe Ferguson returned to the lineup Saturday in right field after missing eight games with a rib injury. Alston indicated it will still be awhile before Fergy can really help the club much.

Ram vets handle K.C. easily, 58-16

By DON BRADLEY
P-B Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Without the veterans, Kansas City looked more like indians than Chiefs.

The team of mostly rookies and free agents that showed up at the Colisum Saturday night was no match for the Rams.

Enroute to a 58-16 victory, the Rams led 14-0 after one quarter, 24-9 at the half and 44-16 after three quarters.

The Rams put together touchdown drives of 33 yards in three plays, 44 yards in five plays, 69 yards in seven plays, 55 yards in nine plays 18 yards in three plays (following a blocked punt by Bob Stein), 50 yards in seven plays, 80 yards in seven plays and 59 yards in four plays and two penalties.

The Angelinos rolled up 517 yards, 357 of them on the ground, to only 172 yards for the Chiefs.

Coach Chuck Knox, who's team led the NFL in rushing last year, may have uncovered a new long distance threat in the person of Cullen Bryant.

Bryant, the 6-1, 218 pound weight lifter, drafted in the second round out of Colorado two years ago, ripped off 177 yards in 11 carries including a 29-yard touchdown scamper in the fourth quarter. Bryant averaged 10.6 yards per carry.

Not to be out done, Rob Scribner burst through the right side of the dazed Chief line for 50 yards and a six-pointer the next time the Rams got the ball.

Scribner had exactly the same average gain per try for nine carries in which he gained 96 yards.

Counting Bryant, the Rams have nine running backs on their roster. But Knox thinks it's a nice problem to have.

"It's a long way to cut down time," Knox said. "You can't have too many running backs. It's too easy to go from feast to famine at that position."

Bryant was moved to running back Monday. "It's something we had thought about all spring," Knox said. "Cullen has great talent and great ability. We watched him returning kickoffs and we saw he had quick feet and the ability to make a break. He's got great speed, good moves and weighs 220 pounds. He has a lot to learn at running back, but this is the first time he's played at running back since his first year in college."

Bryant was a post-game guest on radio and writers crowded around the muscular ball carrier. "It was a great feeling to have the experience of running the ball in professional football," he said.

Bryant and Scribner were only two of a host of Los Angeles backs who sparkled on a cool evening before 48,828. Knox tempered the enthusiasm by reminding everyone that the Chiefs were using their rookies.

"I'll always take a win," Knox said. "But of course we realize that Kansas City was playing with practically all rookies. We have a lot of work to do and we'll start with a 4 p.m. practice tomorrow (today).

RAM RAMBLINGS — Heismann Trophy winner John Capelletti was one of four Rams who missed the contests due to illness or injury. The others were Reggie Echols and Jack Reynolds and regular center Ken Iman.

The Chiefs used John Strycula as running back and also to run back kicks. Strycula is the son of coach John Strycula of Citrus College. Signed as a free agent, the 5-11, 190-pound Utah State grad had been out of school and out of football a year-and-a-half and was working for a door fixture manufacturing firm in Los Angeles.

He called Kansas City assistant coach Walt Corey and asked for a tryout about three weeks ago. "I didn't get any answers from WFL teams I wrote to," Strycula explained. "I had played under coach Corey at Utah State and decided to call him."

Asked what his chances were of sticking with the Chiefs, Strycula grinned and answered, "Probably two. . . . slim and none. But I appreciate the chance I've been given. I'm proud to play pro football at all and I'll give it everything I've got.

Strycula ran back a punt for 12 yards and gained 127 yards on six kickoff returns. He also carried the ball four times for eight yards. "It's the first time I've been used as a running back," Strycula said, "I only played defense and ran back kicks in the first two games."

Rozelle apparently key in football dispute

WASHINGTON (UPI) — NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, the man who isn't there, now apparently holds the key to settlement of the long pro football dispute.

This became more obvious late Friday when negotiations between the NFL Players Association and the Owners' Management Council with federal mediators took a turn for the worse.

At the end of the nine-and-one-half hour Friday session, Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' union, grimly commented: "I'm not optimistic."

He and the seven player members of the association's executive committee were plainly disgruntled over the owners' response to the union's decision to call off the recent strike for a two-week cooling off period.

Garvey also noted pointedly that the players reserved the right to go out on strike again if no settlement is reached during the cooling off.

"We don't need 1,200 players to walk out," he commented. "Only two or three teams would be sufficient."

W. J. Usery Jr., the government's chief labor mediator who is supervising the talks, acknowledged the situation was "down to the crunch" this weekend. A source close to the owners commented "these are the critical hours."

Usery has conferred with Rozelle a number of times by telephone but the two have yet to meet face-to-face on the impasse. Rozelle has kept aloof from the talks on grounds that his role as arbiter in player team disputes is the target of several of the union's controversial "freedom issue" demands.

Several unidentified owners who are not on the bargaining team also may be sought out by Usery. There was belief last week that a settlement was near but the agreement apparently came unstuck when the unidentified owners balked at diminishing Rozelle's authority.

The players were visibly irked that only two owners — Wellington Mara of the New York Giants and Ralph Wilson of the Buffalo Bills —were present for the sessions Thursday and Friday. "And one of them walked out to have dinner," Garvey complained.

The seven members of the union bargaining team also feel they may be jeopardizing their football careers by being held at the bargaining table while others are competing for their jobs.

"They're faced with the situation where they're going to have to go to camp next week or get cut," Garvey remarked. The seven are Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers; Kermit Alexander of the Philadelphia Eagles; Tom Keating of the Pittsburgh Steelers, Alan Page of the Minnesota Vikings, Ed Podolak of the Kansas City Chiefs, Ken Bowman of the Green Bay Packers and Willie Brown of the Oakland Raiders.

Reds win, move within 3½ of L.A.

CINCINNATI (UPI) — Jack Billingham became the National League's first 15-game winner Saturday night by pitching the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-2 victory over the New York Mets.

The victory, coupled with Pittsburgh's triumph over Los Angeles, moved the Reds to within 3 ½ games of the sagging Dodgers in the NL West Division.

Billingham scattered seven hits, walked four and struck out two while completing his sixth game of the season. The Reds wiped out an early 2-0 Met lead with a three-run splurge in the fourth inning and added two more in the fifth when they routed Harry Parker while tagging him with his 11th loss in 15 decisions.

Angels fall as Johnson's home run, Berry's hits awaken Brewers, 4-2

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — Designated hitter Deron Johnson cracked a two-run homer and ex-Angel Ken Berry collected four singles and drove in a run Saturday night to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 4-2 triumph over the California Angels.

Johnson's 13th homer of the year broke a scoreless tie in the sixth inning. Up to that point the game had been a pitching duel between California's Andy Hassler and winner Jim Colborn, who has now beaten the Angels in six of seven career decisions.

Hassler, whose record fell to 2-8, hit George Scott with a pitch before Johnson reached the Angel bullpen in left field with a towering fly.

A single by John Vukovich, a sacrifice bunt by Pedro Garcia and Berry's third hit of the night gave the Brewers a third run in the seventh inning. Berry went into the game batting just .200.

Colborn, working on a three-hitter, lost his shutout bid in the bottom of the seventh inning when Frank Robinson crashed a double off the center field wall and Joe Lahoud followed by hitting the right field foul pole for his 11th home run.

The Brewers added an insurance run in the eighth when Scott and Charlie Moore connected for doubles.

Colborn, bothered by a groin injury earlier in the year, was lifted in the ninth after giving up a leadoff single to Leroy Stanton and Tom Murphy came on to record his 13th save.

Narrow victory for Courageous

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPP)—Bob Bavier and Gerry Driscoll agreed on one thing Saturday after their 12-meter yachts finished the second-closest America's Cup trial race in history: the only real difference between Courageous and Intrepid is the way they are handled.

Courageous, with Bavier at the helm, nosed out the two-time defender by two seconds, after capitalizing on a spinnaker jam which slowed Intrepid at the fifth mark.

It was the fourth race in final trials to select an America's Cup defender. Mariner beat Valiant by 46 seconds in the other division on the 24.3 mile course Saturday.

Stockton leads Trevino by three strokes

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — Dave Stockton, seeking his third tour victory of the year, shot a two-under-par 69 Saturday to take a three-stroke lead over Lee Trevino after 54 holes of the $200,000 Sammy Davis Jr. Greater Hartford Open at Wethersfield Country Club.

Stockton, who held a two-shot advantage after two rounds, picked up a stroke as high winds and a periodic rain helped to deter the low scores of the first two days.

Stockton's 69, following consecutive rounds of 65, places him at 14-under-par 199.

Trevino matched Stockton's 69. The pair, playing together in the final threesome, managed two birdies apiece on the back nine after even-par totals on the front side.

All alone in third place, four shots behind Stockton, was Bob Wynn of Xenia, Ohio. Wynn could only match par in the third round but promised to "stay loose" for Sunday's final 18 in quest of his first PGA title.

South Africa's Bobby Cole, who eagled the par 5 second hole and then double bogeyed the par 3 third, finished with a 68 and a 204 total.

Grouped at the 205 were Australian Bruce Crampton, Labron Harris Jr., of Stillwater, Okla., and Gary Groh of the Grand Bahamas, who won the satellite tournament here to qualify for the big event.

Seven strokes back at 206 were Tom Kite of Austin, Texas, Larry Ziegler of Terre Du Lac, Mo., Ray Floyd of Lake Havasu City City, Ariz., and Australian Bruce Devlin, who has played consistantly at Wethersfield over the years.

Defending champion Billy Casper of Ocean Pines, Md., was in at 207, while South Africa's Gary Player finished with a 209 total.

Stockton, a 10-year veteran who held at least a share of the lead for the first three rounds, admitted that Saturday's weather had given him "one day of breathing room."

"On a course like this, many players are capable of shooting really low rounds, but the course played tougher today, keeping the scores higher, which I think really helps the leader," he said. Stockton gave fair warning to the field that he was ready for Sunday's finale.

"I would be perfectly content to be tied right now," he said. "I'm playing that well. I hit the ball super today. This was far and away the best round I've played here from tee to green. I'm going out now to see if I can get my putting stroke back."

Trevino, who calls Stockton "the All-American boy," admitted that it was "very difficult to read the greens because of overcast skies."

The PGA titlist said he "hit the ball closer to the pins" than he had in the first two rounds but "couldn't make anything."

Stockton, who has pocketed winner's checks at the Glenn Campbell Los Angeles Open and at Quad Cities, has his sights set on the $40,000 top prize here.

"I don't blow many tournaments once I get started," he said.

Vivendi favored in Del Mar feature

DEL MAR, Calif. (UPI) -- Modus Vivendi, a proven sprinter but not as successful at the longer distances, is the expected favorite for today's $30,000 added Del Mar Oaks, the three-year-old filly championship race of the meeting.

Modus Vivendi has won four of five sprint starts and set a Hollywood Park record for 6½ furlongs in the Costa Mesa handicap in July.

But at the Del Mar Oaks distance of 1⅛ miles, the B.J. Ridder filly was a second-place finisher to Lucky Spell in the Princess Stakes in June and was a well-beaten third in the Palomar Handicap opening day at Del Mar.

Lucky Spell, Bold Ballet, T.V. Aglo, Art Queen, Sweet Ramblin Rose, Move Abroad, Sweet Impression, Shah's Envoy, Heather Road and Immortal have been entered to battle Modus Vivendi for the championship.

If all 11 start, the gross purse will be $35,950 and $26,150 to the winner.

Bold Ballet, convincing winner of the San Clemente Stakes Aug. 3 in her last start, has the nod to be the second favorite. She also scored in the 1⅛ mile distance at Hollywood Park.

Modus Vivendi will be coupled in the wagering with Shah's Envoy, a powerful stretch runner.

Today's feature at Del Mar is the Osunitas Stakes, being run in two $15,000 divisions for the 12th time in 14 years. Seventeen fillies and mares have been entered in the race for distaffers three-years-old and up.

The Osunitas is being run at 1 1-16 miles on the turf.

Entered in the first division as the seventh race are Kamadora, June Dear, Metrono Miss, Dapper Dill, Nashville Trucker, Immortal, Mon Miel, Charger's Star and Nevada Lark.

In the second half of the Osunitas as the eighth race, Ready Wit, Cassie Grey, Sun Festival, Quick Cookie, Chalk Face, Mythical Summer, Sweet Ramblin Rose and Sweet Greek were named.

Nhallat, a 6-year-old gelding, won a nose decision in a photo finish with 6-5 favorite High Protein in Friday's $11,000 feature to score a $15.20 victory. Benson was third in the field of six.

P-B Staff Writer

The name of the game is defense.

The Pomona Police Association Little League squad proved that point Saturday morning as they posted a narrow 3-2 win over Park Avenue Hospital to take the 1974 City L.L. crown.

Park had beaten P.P.A. earlier in the tourney, but the determined team from the Pomona National LL. came back to sweep three straight games and the tourney title. In those three victories P.P.A. did not commit an error afield.

That flawless defense was at work again Saturday, as Park threatened to bust loose with their powerful bats only to be kept at bay by some sparkling defensive work.

Meanwhile, the Pomona Police nine took advantage of numerous Park miscues to score three times in the second inning. A walk to Mike Johnson and no less than five Park errors on the infield produced the rally.

Sporting a 3-0 lead, P.P.A. hurler Tom Newberry held on for the win. But it wasn't easy.

Park Ave. loaded the sacks in both the first and second innings to no avail. With the bases loaded in the first and two away, Newberry induced Steve Shaffer to ground out. In an identical situation in hhe second, losing hurler Tom Thomas ripped a drive to left but Chuck Mikel gloved the rocket for the third out.

Park's Bill Eldridge ripped a homer to left leading off the fourth to make it 3-1, but Newberry retired the next three batters without incident.

Newberry had an easy fourth frame, but was in hot water again in the fifth. With two away Ray Tolentino and Steve Shaffer singled and Bill Rice doubled home Tolentino. With the margin now a tight 3-2, and runners at second and third, Newberry fanned Eric Mendivil to end the threat.

Jim Gomez led off the Park Ave. sixth with a single, but Robert Sanchez grounded to second baseman Paul Munch, who tagged out Gomez and fired to first to get Sanchez for a nifty double play.

Richard Davis followed by skying out to center fielder Mitch Bluethman and the Pomona Police Association became the 1974 City champs.

Steve Page led the P.P.A. attack by reaching base safety four straight times on two singles and two Park errors. Page also drove in a run in the second inning.

Eldridge was the only Park Ave. player with more than one hit.

Carner paces ladies, fires ace, leads by 5

ST. PAUL, Minn. (UPI) — Joanne Carner, sparked by the first hole-in-one in her career, shot a three-under-par 70 Saturday for a 36-hole total of 138 and opened a five-stroke lead in the 54-hole $35,000 St. Paul Ladies Open golf tournament.

Mrs. Carner, who turned pro four years ago after a brilliant amateur career, aced the 140-yard par-three fourth hole on the windswept 6,402-yard Keller Golf Course.

"I missed a couple of four footers on the first three holes and I was a little shaky. The hole in one really settled me down. It was the first one in 25 years of playing," she said.

Sandra Post, who trailed by a shot after the opening round faded to a one-over 74, but remained in second place one stroke ahead of the ladies tour beauty queen, Laura Baugh.

Bonny Bryant was alone at 145, one stroke ahead of Pam Higgins who matched par for the second straight day.

Joann Prentice was alone at 147.

Sandra Palmer, defending champion, started slowly and bogeyed three of the first five holes and finished with 76 for 148. She was bunched with several other players at that figure, including Murle Breer who skyed to 77 after her opening 71.

Renee Powell, the tour's only regular black player and one of the most popular among the fans in this event, was bothered by the high winds and settled tor 78 for 149.

Mrs. Carner birdied the seventh, eighth, 11th and 12th holes. She had three bogeys.

L.B. wins first game in Connie Mack series

FARMINGTON, N.M. (UPI) — A pair of three-hit pitching performances gave defending champion Long Beach, Calif., a 6-0 win over El Paso and Chicago a 4-0 shutout over Baltimore Friday in the 16th annual Connie Mack World Series.

Long Beach pitcher Pete Tereschuk also produced the only unearned run for his team in the third inning of the nightcap, with a one-run triple. He went the seven-inning distance to notch the pitching victory.

El Paso hurler Dave Runkle, who also went all the way on the mound, gave up only two hits, but his teammates committed five errors.

In the opener, Chicago pitcher Dave Rogers gave up just one walk along with the three hits in gaining the victory. The big hit of that game was a double by Mike Politakis, which drove in two Chicago runs in the second inning.

In a night contest, Baltimore and El Paso will meet to determine which team is the first to fall in the double elimination tourney.

Bruins begin fall grid drills

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — UCLA opened its first day of Fall football practice Saturday with 112 invited hopefu's reporting, including 25 returning lettermen, Bruin track star Maxie Parks and 17 promising prep athletes.

"I think we are ready but I'm a little apprehensive about having to face Tennessee in only three weeks," first-year coach Dick Vermeil said. "We are all thinking strictly about Tennessee at this point."

The Bruins, who were 9-2 last year, open the 1974 campaign Sept. 7 at the University of Tennessee.

"I don't think UCLA is as deep as last year in talent because we lost 12 players to the pros," Vermeil added. "It's hard to replace such outstanding players.

"We have good size but all good teams have exceptionally big players now."

Parks, UCLA's crack quartermiler, is returning to football after a two-year layoff. He has finished his track eligibility but will be a junior in football if he makes the squad. He last played football at Fresno City College.

Among the freshmen trying out are defensive tackle John Lopker of Anaheim, linebacker Frank Manumaleuna of Wilmington, linebacker Lou Mascola of Torrance, wide receiver James Sarpy of San [illegible] and [illegible] lan Starks of Ontario.

All five played in last month's North-South Shrine game, featuring some of Southern California's top graduating high school footballers.

Jockey killed in fall

CHESTER, W. Va. (UPI) — Jockey Johnny Hathaway was fatally injured Saturday night when his mount stumbled during the running of the fifth race at nearby Waterford Park, throwing him into the path of another thoroughbred.

Hathaway, 23, one of the leading riders at Waterford, was aboard Sir Trig in the 1 ¼mile race when the animal stumbled as he was preparing to make his stretch drive. A trailing horse, Grain, stepped on Hathaway.

The young jockey, who had been riding at Waterford for only three months, was pronounced dead on arrival at Weirton General Hospital of a crushed chest.

He was the second jockey to die in a race at Waterford this year. Mike Tornambe was killed last February when his mount stumbled and threw him over the infield railing.

A native of Kalispell, Mont., Hathaway is survived by his wife, Renee.

Upland reaches legion title game

Frank Pastore and Bruce Richardson, for the second straight night, teamed up for a four-hitter and Pat Proulx scored one run and singled home the winning run as Upland edged Fountain Valley 2-1 Friday night in the semifinals of the Ontario American Legion Baseball Tournament at John Galvin Park.

Pastore started and hurled a hitless three frames with Richardson pitching the final four innings. Proulx squeezed home Larry Lodolo with the winning run in the seventh inning.

Upland faces Anaheim today at 3:30 p.m. at John Galvin for the championship.

Chris wins 9th in row, takes Canadian Open

TORONTO (UPI) — Chris Evert, in her ninth straight tournament win of the year, Saturday defeated fellow American Julie Heldman, 6-0, 6-3, to win the women's singles title in the Canadian Open Tennis Championships.

In one of the men's singles semifinals, Spain's Manuel Orantes downed fellow Spaniard Juan Gisbert, 6-4, 6-2. Orantes will meet the winner of the other semifinal between Tom Okker and Guillermo Vilas to be played later in the day.

The 19-year-old Miss Evert lost only nine games in the five matches she played in the tournament at the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club.

In the first set of her match against Miss Heldman, she allowed the 28-year-old tournament veteran only 12 points, five of them in the last game.

The win gave Miss Evert top prize money of $6,000, bringing her total earnings for the year to over $150,000. Miss Heldman collected a check for $3,600.

Miss Heldman, though she appeared shaky during the first set, made Miss Evert work for her points. Many points took a dozen strokes and more.

In the second set, Miss Heldman began to move the ball around with more confidence and put pressure on Miss Evert. She led 3-2 and was a point away from breaking Miss Evert's serve in the sixth game.

But she missed a narrow line shot and lost the game to even the set. This gave Miss Evert the opening she needed and she promptly broke Miss Heldman's serve in the next game. She controlled the match thereafter.

Miss Evert, the Wimbledon champion, has now won 47 matches in a row.

Vaughn inks with Squires

NORFOLK, Va.(UPI) — Seven-foot David Vaughn, a highly-regarded center from Nashville, Tenn., who played at Oral Roberts University, signed a multi-year contract Friday with the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association.

"David Vaughn is one of the cornerstones on which we will rebuild this franchise," said General Manager Jack Ankerson. "His signing is indicative of the committment the new owners of the Squires have made to achieve an excellence on the court equal to the support the club has received from the stands."

Vaughn played for Oral Roberts as a freshman and sophomore and then transferred to the University of Nevada at Las Vegas and sat out last season. He would have had two more years of eligibility at Las Vegas.

He averaged 32.2 points and 23.1 rebounds per game on ORU's freshman team and 19.2 points and 14.3 rebounds as a sophomore starter on the varsity.

"David is a young, big, strong kid who can run," said Squires coach Al Bianchi.

GETTING LOOSE — Joe Namath unwinds his throwing arm in New York Jets' training camp this week. He was one of striking veterans who reported for the 14-day 'cooling-off' period.

Tee to Cup

He's the father of a young golf champ

By PHIL ROCHE
P-B Staff Writer

What's it like being the father of a world's champion golfer? We wanted to find out so Friday we dropped in on Terry D. Hart whose son Jeff recently won the World's Championship at Balboa Park for 14-year-olds with scores of 68-67-74. Jeff won handily, breezing in five strokes ahead of the second place finisher.

Some seven years ago Terry moved his family to a home on the 7th fairway of Indian Wells in Riverside. Son Jeff started playing when he was 7½ and Terry's biggest problem now is getting the youth off the course once in a while to come home for dinner.

"The only thing I showed him was which end of the club to hold," says Terry who plays to a 12 handicap. At age 8, Jeff was shooting 45s in tourneys; at 10, he won the World's Championship for boys 10 and under. Today, the 5-7, 130-pounder pumps the ball out at 270 yards, fires 67s at courses like Indian Wells, and beats professional players on occasion.

No 14-year-old should be that good. Nevertheless, Jeff is. Recently he fired a 69 at Brentwood in a Pro-Junior tournamen in which his pro partner shot a 76.

"Jeff just took to the game," says proud father Terry, who is assistant merchandise manager at McMahan's furniture in Pomona. "He's never had a formal lesson, but he has a natural swing and a desire to play good golf."

Two weeks ago Terry dropped his son off at a hit-all-you-want driving range at 4 p.m. before the World's championships. Five hours later Jeff was still firing balls out, practicing and sharpening his game.

"He plays in all kinds of tournaments," Terry said "and I love to see him play. Somethimes I take it more seriously than he does, but I love golf, and he's fun to watch."

Two other sons are also fine players. Mark, a 4-handicapper, is headed for UC Riverside, and Terry Jr. also plays to a 4 but prefers baseball.

Anyway, the keys to junior golf success seem to be a father who loves golf, a home near a golf course, a burning desire to succeed. . .and of course, a natural ability to play the game. Jeff has all these going for him.

Two fine golfers were winners in the Best Ball Foursome tourament at Los Serranos last Saturday with a combined net score of 55. They were Bill Morgan and Jo Rojo using scores from Dario Nicoli and Tom Hall. In second place with 56 were Joe D'Amico, Harry Sherrard, Fred Stollberg and Charles Bitney.

In third place were Doyle Williams, Steve Johnson, Nicoli and Hall. Top finishers in the closest-to-pin contest were Milan Jablan, Dean Mardis, Al Sherwood and Harold Baker.

On September 15-16 the co-sponsored Air California Lake Shastina Inaugural Pro-Am Gold Tournament will be held at the Lake Shastina Golf Course in Northern California's Siskiyou County's "Scared Mountain Country" in the presence of majestic 14,162 ft. Mt. Shasta.

The host pro is Mike Evinger, of Lake Shastina Golf and Country Club, Lake Shastina, Calif.

Invitations will be sent soon to PGA in this area. These pros will have the option of submitting the entries of two of their club's ranking amateurs.

Plans call for 72 competing foursomes with cash and gift prizes totaling $28,000.

Entry fees are $60 for professionals and $45 for amateurs. This cover golf for two days carts, and a tournament luau with Hawaiian entertainment.

Jim Powell, long-hitting pro out at Via Verde C.C., says the Southern California PGA tournament each summer should be medal play instead of the combination of medal qualifying and match play for the final five rounds.

"I think medal play would be the best test," says Powell, who tied the competitive course record at Mission Viejo with a 67, but lost out in match play with Ron O'Connor, who finished second in the finals.

We tend to agree with Powell. Although match play is a great challenge, we think from a spectator's point of view, medal play is more fun since on the final days almost everyone is around to play, instead of just two players.

This year's finals were one-sided with Paul McGuire of San Gabriel far out in front of O'Connor.

Bush worries about foreign domination

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Jim Bush, UCLA's highly respected track and field coach, is confident the NCAA will do something about the influx of foreign athletes to America.

In fact, he's sure about it.

In June at Austin, Tex., foreign athletes made up 13 per cent of the total entry at the NCAA track and field championships. They won six individual events and accounted for more than 25 per cent of the team points.

Bush, who has won four national collegiate titles in his 10 years at UCLA, is a member of the NCAA's Track and Field Executive Committee and he's alarmed.

"Something has to be done and I think the NCAA realizes this," he said. "If something isn't done, track and field could be ruined in this country. I'm not against foreign athletes per se. I'm just talking about one meet—the American collegiate championships."

According to Bush, attorneys for the NCAA are examining a landmark decision by Judge Gerhard A. Gesell last Dec. 10 which found that an NCAA bylaw failed to comply with the equal protection clause in the 14th amendment and should be suspended.

"The judge said the by-law was unconstitutional," Bush continued. "I couldn't believe it. I always thought you had to be a citizen before you had any constitutional rights.

"So the judge opened the door. A few schools are going to recruit ready-made, veteran foreign athletes by the car load. As an example, Brigham Young scored 41 points in the NCAA meet this year and 31 of the points were scored by foreigners.

"I don't think it's fair for our young kids—18, 19, 20, 21— having to compete against a foreign athlete who is a lot older and a lot more experienced. It's simply not fair.

"Under the NCAA's new rules, we can have only seven scholarships for track and field per year and a total of 23. Well, unless something is done, you'll see more and more foreign athletes competing in this country."

Bush thinks the NCAA "will find a way" of going back to its old by-law.

"I believe we'll appeal the judge's decision and we'll win," he said.

If there is an appeal and the NCAA loses?

"Well," Bush sighed, "I guess the only way to handle that situation would be to do away with the team championship in track and field if that happened. But I don't think that will happen."

The 47-year-old Bruin coach had French pole vaulter Francois Tracanelli on his team this year and he will have two new foreigners on his squad next spring.

One is hurdler Phillip Mills of New Zealand, the son of former University of Southern California discus thrower Les Mills. Mills is paying his own way.

The other is an outstanding 18-year-old quartermiler from Canada, Bill Kennedy.

"He's (Kennedy) an excellent student and he will be on an athletic scholarship," said Bush. "I want to show people on the other side of the fence on this question that I will suffer too if the NCAA cracks down on foreign athletes."

Bush emphasized the majority of college track and field coaches in the nation were against foreign athletes coming in and taking over.

"The only ones (coaches) who want to see a status quo are the ones who don't want to coach," he added. "They want to gather up ready made teams. But, fortunately, there aren't many coaches who feel this way."

'Slugger' bats are now made out-of-state

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) -- Millions of baseball bats bearing the world-famous oval "Louisville Slugger" trademark are used each year by players from beginning little leaguers to 20-year major league veterans.

Legendary stars from Honus Wagner and Ty Cobb through Babe Ruth and Ted Williams to current stars Hank Aaron and Pete Rose have used Louisville sluggers.

But Louisville Sluggers are no longer made in Louisville— or even in Kentucky. Instead, the five to six million Louisville Slugger bats produced each year will be turned on lathes at a shiny new facility in southern Indiana.

Hillerich & Bradsby Co., makers of the famous bats, completed their move to the new facilities at the end of June. The employes of the company's bat department reported to the Indiana plant at the end of their annual two-week vacation July 16.

However, company spokesmen say their product will continue to bear the famous Louisville Slugger trademark, first registered in 1894, rejecting any notions that an "Indiana Belter" might hit the market.

"As far as we are concerned, we are still in the metropolitan Louisville area," said Bill Williams, vice president for advertising. "We feel that the name Louisville Slugger, after 80 years or so, is a name that will be, wherever the bats are made.

"Our business was expanding and we did not have the room and capability to produce more and more in the old facility."

Williams said the company tried to keep its Kentucky connections, and was pleased that the facility it finally located was in the Louisville area.

"But we went into it very objectively," he said. "The decision on a new plant site was strictly business. Our first priority had to be to find a suitable place to grow and expand. If it happened to be close to Louisville, so much the better.

"But we would not have taken a less feasible plant in Louisville opposed to a more feasible plant somewhere else."

The company moved its golf club manufacturing division to the new plant, between Clarksville and Jeffersonville, Ind., about a year ago and expects to move its giant timberyard— where billets of ash wood are seasoned before being made into bats—from another Louisville location to the Indiana site in a couple of months.

Yacht racing goes public for the first time

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — America's Cup financing, long the exclusive realm of wealthy yachting buffs, has taken a new twist in this year's $9 million competition.

Two of the syndicates, Intrepid West and King's Point, went public, seeking tax-exempt donations for the first time in the 123-year history of the competition.

"This is a helluva lot more fun than the closed-room syndicate operation because we now have an enormous fan club," says Dick Friel, business manager for the West Coast-oriented Intrepid group. "Ours is a people campaign. They really like it. There is an openness that hasn't existed before."

The Intrepid group also pulls in small $1 and $2 donations from younger fans and folks who drop by the office trailers that make up its Newport headquarters, seeking buttons, bumper stickers and other race paraphernalia.

The total cost of buying or building the sleek 12-meter yachts, transportation to Newport and all supportive activities for the four American boats and the French and Australian challengers hovers between $9 million and $10 million, according to estimates provided by each group.

The greatest chunk being spent is $6 million (in American dollars) by Australian land developer Alan Bond in the most formidable foreign challenge ever.

Bond a 34-year-old self-made millionaire, got some assistance from "small syndicate people," according to Brian Leary, manager of the Southern Cross challenge.

It must be pointed out that between $2 million and $3 million spent by Bond went into a racing-training complex built on Australia's Western Coast to house the twelves and crews for rigorous training that started last February. It is an integral part of his Yanchep Sun City resort development for which the Cup challenge works as advertising.

Long Beach AD too busy to worry

By JIM COUR
UPI Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Perry Moore isn't going to waste any time worrying about spilled milk.

Moore, 42, is the new athletic director at Long Beach State, which was the target last January of three years of NCAA sanctions against its football and basketball programs. Long Beach was hit for recruiting violations in both sports.

"Look, I can't worry about what's happened in the past," said Moore, who has been on the job only two weeks.

"Being on probation makes the job tougher, of course, but it's reality. I have to build my own program. Everything else will take care of itself."

Moore, the athletic director at Colorado State the last six years, stressed that Long Beach would abide by the rules now.

"I have a reputation as a guy that lives by the rules," he said. "Rules are made to live by. We are the NCAA, our institution is part of the NCAA, we have a vote and we make the rules. If we make them, we ought to live by them."

A member of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, Long Beach State is competing for the sports dollar here against UCLA and University of Southern California.

"It's like being in the restaurant business," Moore said. "I personally like competition. Better competition makes you hustle more.

"UCLA and USC are very fine institutions. But there are a lot of people and a lot of great athletes in the area."

Colorado State did not renew Moore's contract, which expired June 30. He was the center of controversy throughout his six years at Fort Collins, Colo.

In 1972, he staged a bitter battle for his job after all but one coach on the staff said he was interfering with their operation.

"I'm not bitter about what happened," Moore said. "Colorado State is a fine university and I wish them the best of luck. I'm just looking forward to another challenge now. And this is quite a challenge."

Record of Strauss tone poem issued

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

NEW YORK (UPI) — For Strauss (Richard) lovers, there is something on records in recent months—two recordings of his underplayed tone poem Sinfonia Domestica and tree of the concertos which were a parenthesis around his career.

The Sinfonia Domestica is program music about the Strauss family itself which caused some controversy in its time from critics who doubted that a baby's bath and the act of love should be displayed in music.

The ninth of Strauss' tentone poems, first performed in 1904, it deserves a place in the permanent repertory. The two recent performances on records underline this.

The new one is by Herbert Von Karajan directing the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra (Angel S-36973).

The older one is a budget priced Odyssey reissue of the unforgettable performance by George Szell and the Cleveland Symphony (Y 32889). This happens to be my favorite, but both are masterful performances.

A bonus on the Szell record is a performance of Strauss' Horn Concerto No. 1 in E flat major played by Myron Bloom.

Strauss' concertos came at the beginning and end of his composing career. The No. 1 horn concerto, composed for the natural valveless horn and originally for Strauss' father, came in 1882 and 1883 — when he was 19. "Already Till Eulenspiegel" can be heard.

The Horn Concerto No. 2 in E flat major was composed in 1942 for the French horn with valves. It is a complex and subtle work, and the echoes of Eulenspiegel still are there.

Von Karajan and the Berlin with Norbert Hauptmann have recorded No. 2 along with the even later Oboe concerto (1946) played by Lothar Koch (Deutsche Grammophon 2530 439).

John Browning playing Ravel's Concerto in D for the Left Hand with Erich Leinsdorf conducting the Philharmonia Orchestra (Seraphim S-60224).

The first recording of Rodion Shehedrin's music for the ballet "Anna Karenina", based on Tolstoy's novel, premiered in Moscow in 1972 with Maya Plisetskaya (Angel-Melodiya SRB-4126 -two records).

'Grease'

Musical spoof of the '50s to return to Los Angeles

"Grease," the comedy hit that satirized the rock 'n' roll era of the 1950s, will return to Los Angeles to open a four-week engagement at the Aquarius Theater Sept. 19.

The hit show, produced by Kenneth Waissman and Maxine Fox, was a long-running musical on Broadway.

In June of last year the National Touring Company of "Grease" opened at the Shubert Theater for a record-breaking eight-week engagement, and and English company gave Londoners a taste of the distinctively American musical.

The song and dance extravaganza about manners, morals, beehive hairdos and ducktails of the '50s has met with critical acclaim throughout the country.

Performances for the limited engagement are scheduled for 8 Tuesday thru Friday nights, with shows on Saturdays at 7 and 10:30 p.m. and shows on Sundays at 2:30 and 7 p.m.

Tickets are priced at $5.50, $6.50 and $7.50 weekdays and Sundays; Saturday shows are $6.50, $7.50 and $8.50.

Mail orders may be obtained by sending a check and addressed envelope to "Grease," Aquarius Theater, 6230 Sunset Blvd., Los Angeles 90028.

Issue in doubt

Will French TV continue to cherchez la femme?

By ALINE MOSBY

PARIS (UPI) — Along with handmade clothes and cheap little restaurants, the future of another cherished institution of France —female television announcers —hangs in doubt.

On two of France's three channels, smiling beauties with gleaming teeth, lacquered hair and inextinguishable happiness announce program schedules.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing in July ordered the state-operated TV to break up into six competing systems by year's end.

Whether the reorganized television will retain the 27-year-old custom of lady announcers "depends upon the new program director," said Jacques Planche, supervisor since 1953 of his stable of girl announcers.

"The girls may disappear with computers taking over. They are artisan work."

The third channel which opened in 1972 uses computer-run printed announcements to identify the channel and announce programs.

Female TV announcers have appeared elsewhre in Europe but Planche said France holds the record of nine girls for the two channels.

The lady announcers came into being "as a human, charming touch" when Channel One opened in 1947. In line with orders from the French Academy to keep English out of the French language, the girls are supposed to be called "presentatrices". But Planche and the public still call them "speakerines" in Franglais.

When the second channel opened in 1964, Planche chose three more speakerines out of 10,000 applicants.

Of his nine girls, all are married, most have children and one —the eldest and the wife of one of the TV executives —is a grandmother.

Down the years one girl quit to go on radio, another to become a photographer. Planche fired one when she made the front pages by biting two policemen and another was dismissed for posing virtually nude for a magazine.

In addition to announcing programs, the girls apologize when films are put on upside down or in case of other technical difficulties, a steady characteristic of French TV.

The girls' sing-song introductions are mimicked mercilessly by stage comedians. But Planche said the public regards them as friends, showering them with fan letters, propositions and proposals.

One day speakerine Catherine Langeais got caught in the rain outside the studio and had to pull her hair back from her face.

"The minute she got on TV the telephone calls started, 100 at a time, demanding to know why she changed her hair style," Planche said.

He led the way to a studio where a speakerine Evelyn Dheliat was putting on lipstick in front of a makeup table next to the sofa where she sits before the camera for seven hours.

New Voices Showcase

VCT plans contest for play-writers

Valley Community Theater today announced a competition for original one-act plays to be presented during the 1975 season.

New Voices Showcase, supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts, will be one of the major productions of the season. Three plays will be selected to be staged and directed by VCT members at the theater, 132 E. Third St., Pomona.

Authors of the winning plays will receive a cash award and will serve as consultants on the productions.

Andy Case of La Verne, veteran VCT actor and director, will serve as chairman of the eight-member New Voices Showcase committee.

Four copies of the entries must be submitted to Case at 2278 Seventh St., La Verne 91750, by Dec. 1. The plays should run no longer than 45 minutes. If the work is a musical, it must be accompanied by a completed score. Tapes, if available, should also be submitted.

British museums and galleries spreading out all over London

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — Like most museums around the world, London's are bursting at the seams. Unlike most, London's are doing something about it.

Without much fanfare a program of expansion has spread famous museums and galleries all over town.

The British Museum has a new separate building. The Tate and National Art Galleries are constructing new extensions. Even the National Portrait gallery has a new annex.

Alone of London's major museums, the Victoria and Albert is not adding to its six miles of corridors. But it, too, is caught up in a revolution which is revitalizing London's historic but hidebound museums.

This year three top galleries got new directors, shuffled about in an unprecedented game of musical museum chairs.

Sir John Pope-Hennessy took over as director of the British Museum. Into his place at the Victoria and Albert went the infant terrible of the museum world, 38-year-old Dr. Roy Strong. Strong's job at the National Portrait Gallery went to the other of "the terrible twins," Dr. John Hayes, 44, of the London Museum.

Between them, Strong and Hayes have been injecting verve and sparkle into scholarly museum life. Strong staged flamboyant—some said outrageous—shows which brought the Portrait Gallery unaccustomed publicity and unaccustomed visitors. Hayes, among other things, gave miniskirt designer Mary Quant a retrospective.

The new spate of expansion was planned, and in some cases completed, before the shuffle of top jobs.

The British Museum, while rebuilding such internal marvels as new Greek and Assyrian rooms, gave up when it came to ethnography, a wing crammed like grandma's attic with curios and relics from the world's wide corners.

Now the Museum of Mankind, a stately British Museum annex near Piccaddily Circus, houses the collection in a changing series of special exhibits. The latest is a stunningly mounted survey of religious cults of West Africa, joining another recent addition, a panorama of the Maya of Central America.

The National Gallery of Art, now celebrating its 150th birthday, has all but completed a slab-sided new extension. It opens next year with a major show of German art, and will allow a wide new program of gallery activities.

The Tate Gallery, so cramped for space that two-thirds of its Turners are unseen (the Royal Academy will borrow them for a major show later this year), is building a new extension to expand its exhibition space by 50 per cent in late 1976.

The National Portrait Gallery's annex in Carlton Terrace opened this spring. It is an entirely new idea, concentrating on the modern arts of photography and movies.

The Victoria and Albert, concentrating on internal rebuilding, has closed its sculpture court for years-long remodelling. But its vast collection of gold and silver church plate, once piled like a vicar's overflowing treasury, now has reopened with its glittering treasures properly on show. Several other sections are being remounted.

All these museums—and their extensions—are free again. A brief experiment with admission charges early this year caused such controversy, and such a drop in new Labor government can celled admission fees as one of its first acts.

Music School sets auditions for orchestras

The Claremont Community School of Music will hold auditions for its two youth orchestras at La Verne College Aug. 27-30. They are open to musicians from 13 to 25 living in the valley.

The senior orchestra is conducted by David Evans, the junior orchestra by Erica Buxbaum. They are teachers of orchestral techniques in local school districts and conductors of adult orchestras and chamber music ensembles. Evans, a professional trumpeter, is brass coach for the All-Southern California Orchestra. Miss Buxbaum is a performing violinist.

The senior orchestra meets Saturday mornings. It performs several times a year at schools and colleges, offering a repertoire ranging from the classics to modern music.

The junior orchestra meets Monday afternoons and also gives several concerts a year. It is open to adults who wish to learn beginning orchestral techniques.

Appointments for auditions can be arranged by calling JoAnn Miller, 982-4394, or the School of Music, 624-3012.

Film industry alive in beautiful Burbank

BURBANK, Calif. (UPI) — All right, movie buffs, what does "Fantasia" have in common with "Lost Horizon" and why is "Mary Poppins" like "From Here to Eternity"?

They are not Hollywood products, that's what. More importantly —to some —they were all made in Burbank, which is getting a bit testy over the fact that the name of the town next door is still regarded as synonomous with the movie industry.

"The motion picture business is alive and well in Burbank," said Leland Ayers Wednesday.

Ayers is a Burbank city councilman and has set out to reclaim the city's rightful place in the entertainment world, despite the barbed remarks of Johnny Carson on the "Tonight Show" and Rowan and Martin's guaranteed laugh-getter line about "beautiful downtown Burbank."

"This is the film capital of the world," Ayers said, announcing a contest for the best movie ever made in Burbank. He referred to "the deterioration of that city on the other side of the hill, which used to be the motion picture capital of the world."

"STOMACH ULCERS DON'T BOTHER ME"

Says Bert DeMeter, printer, 2619 Alvira St., L.A., "I have been suffering from an ulcer for many years and spent lots of money for treatments and all kinds of diets but it keeps coming back. In 5 weeks under Dr. Wing I felt like a new person. I did not lose any time from work. No more poached eggs and milk, and I can eat all my meals in restaurants. It is a blessing to order regular meals again. It has been over 6 years and I am still feeling fine."

Art group schedules exhibition

The San Bernardino Art Association will hold its Inland Exhibition in the Fine Arts Gallery of the National Orange Show grounds, San Bernardino, Oct. 6-24.

Ralph Pierce Music plans three recitals

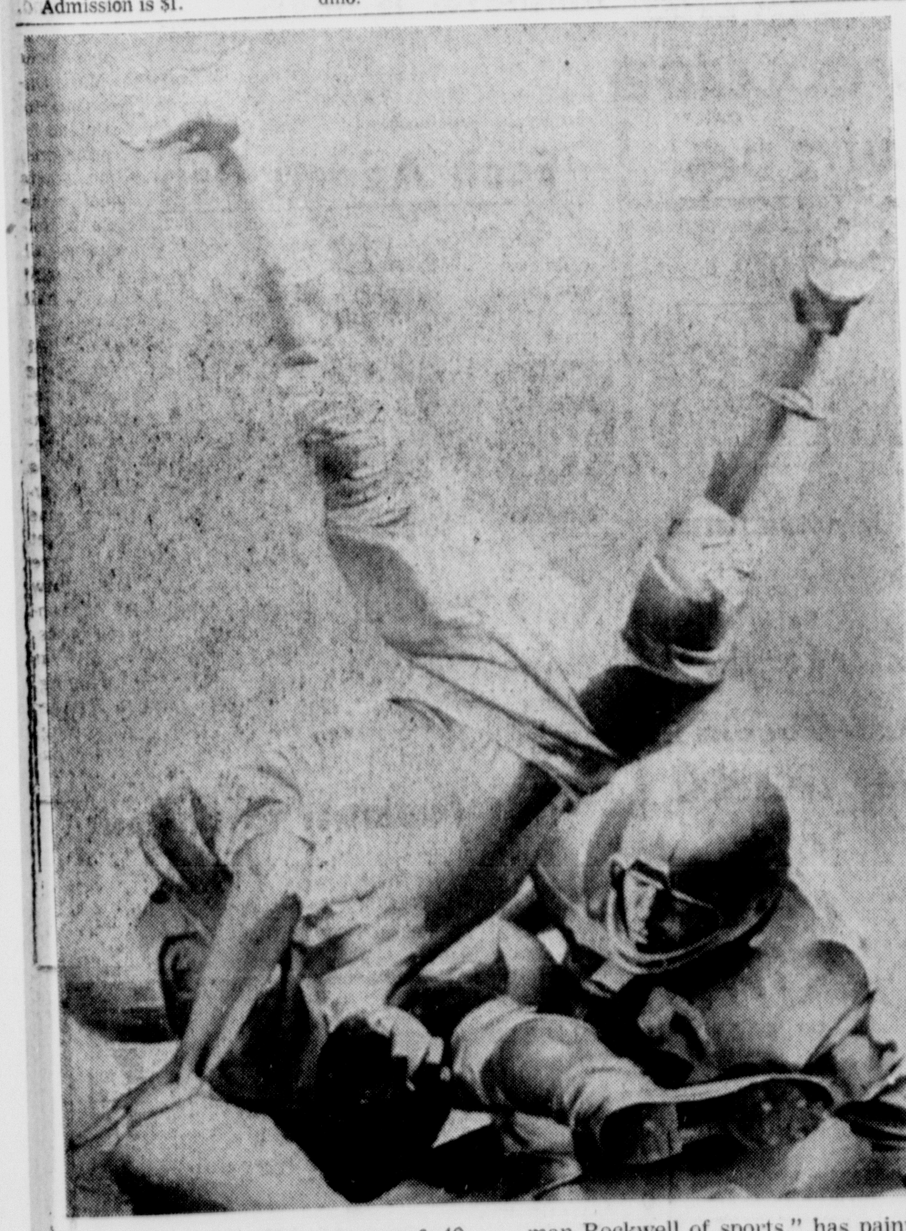
Three piano recitals will be held at Ralph Pierce Music, 822 N. Garey Ave., Pomona, starting at 2 o'clock this afternoon to celebrate the opening of the new store.

The first performer will be Gary Davenport, home for a summer recess from his studies at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City where he is a student of Rosina Lhevinne. He was a student of Alice Shapiro in Claremont while he was in high school, and played on numerous programs in the area during that time. Earlier this summer he appeared with the orchestra in the Redlands Bowl concert series.

The pianist at 3 p.m. will be Geoffrey Merrill of Redlands, a graduate of the University of Redlands School of Music. He was also a performer in the Redlands Bowl earlier this summer as the winner of the 1974 Young Artist Competition. Having recently completed his four-year stint in the U.S. Air Force, he will now be continuing his music studies at the graduate school of Cal State Northridge where he is a student of pianist Aube Tzerko.

At 4 p.m. the last recital of the afternoon will be presented by Pierce. A former pianist who has appeared in recital in most U.S. cities, Pierce operates his music store where each member of the staff is a pianist.

The public is invited to attend one or all of the performances without charge.



FIRST DOWN—This is one of 40 sports program reproductions by Lon Keller on view through Sept. 29 at the California Museum of Science & Industry, Exposition Park, Los Angeles. Keller, known as "the Norman Rockwell of sports," has painted hundreds of covers for sports programs for high school, college and professional football, baseball, basketball, track and boxing. Admission to the exhibit is free.

Compromise housing bill goes to Ford

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A $11.1 billion compromise measure revising the government's funding of housing and community development projects has been passed by the House and sent to President Ford.

The bill, approved 377 to 21 Thursday, would replace the present nine urban programs — including model cities and urban renewal —with a one block grant. It would also set up a new housing subsidy program and raise the ceiling on FHA-insured home mortgages from $33,000 to $45,000.

Baja California se prepara para mucho turismo

Por Murray J. Brown-Editor de viajes UPI.

LA PAZ — Baja California — Los primeros "visitantes" Americanos al cabo de Baja California fueron soldados que ocuparan la peninsula durante la guerra con Mexico en 1847.

Ahora, los directivos del turismo Mexicano estan esperando otra "invasion" esta vez de norte Americanos que van en busca de sol, mar, arena y deporte.

Las esperanzas estan principalmente aseguradas al terminar el diciembre Tijuana en la frontera al Cabo San Lucas, donde las aguas del Mar de Cortes encuentran al Oceano Pacifico.

Con la excepcion de sus fronteras en el norte, lo mas de Baja California ha sido casi inaccesible excepto por barco o avion. En efecto, muchos de los centros de pesca y otros puntos de recreo han tenido que construir sus propios campos de aterrizaje y muelles.

Volamos a La Paz desde la ciudad de Mexico por la linea Aeromexico la cual tambien opera desde los Estados Unidos en la costa occidental. Tambien existe servicio de barca de transporte nocturno desde Mazatlan en el continente Mexicano.

Carlos Palacio, director de turismo en esta area, nos dijo que 150,000 personas visitaron La Paz durante 1973. Con la terminacion de la carretera, e introduciendo el uso de barcas de transporte desde Puerto Vallarta, el dijo que mas de 300,000 visitantes son esperados esta ano. Hoteles nuevos, auto-moteles y centros recreativos estan bajo construccion para esperar el influjo turistico.

Hice mi primera visita junto con otros escritores Americanos encargados de la seccion de viajes como invitados del Consejo Nacional Mexicano del Turismo y las lineas aereas. Entre otros nos acompanaba Virgil Ward, filmando escenas Para su programa de pesca en la television norteamericana.

El deporte de la pesca ha sido por mucho tiempo una gran attrccion para Norte-Americanos—aunque existen millas de playas y montanas virgenes y desiertos. Ward, quien ha pescado alrededor del mundo, dijo que las aguas cercanas son un "paraiso para pescadores."

Un comunicado del consejo del turismo dice que hay mas de 800 classes de pescado esperando al pescador. Nosotros pescamos marlin, dorado, bonita, tuna yellowtail y macarela. Vimos sailfish, bottle-nosed dolphins, focas, tortugas y una ballena madre con su ballenita.

Por automovil fuimos al Cabo San Lucas desde La Paz, la ciudad mas poblada, 500,000 habitantes y capital del territorio sur de Baja California.

Hay cerca de 75 millas volando-pueden rentarse aviones-pero es casi el doble de largo viajando por carretera.

El viaje duro casi cinco horas. La carretera esta pavimentada pero es angosta y sinuosa como una serpiente alrededor y a traves de montanas secas y deside tos carentes de vida humana, o animal.

Si usted planea viajar por carretera, vaya preparado para emergencias-gasolineras y poblados son pocos y muy separados entre si. Y tomelo con calma. Un norteamericano de San Diego nos platico que el habia tenido dificultad maniobrando su trailer en ciertas partes entre El Rosario y Santa Rosalia.

Estuvimos dos dias en el nuevo Hotel Solmar de Luis Bulnes ubicado en la punta de la peninsula. Todos sus 21 cuartos tienen terrazas con vista a la playa y al mar y Los Arcos-gigantescos pemascos covertidos en arcos al ser roidos por el mar.

El hotel tiene alberca, bar y su comedor con ventanales sirviendo de pared. No hay telefono, en efecto, no hay uno al sur de la Paz y comunicaciones se hacen por medio de radio o television. Existe una pista de aterrizaje, y barcos de renta estan disponibles para expediciones pesqueras mas adentro o fuera de la costa.

De Cabo San Lucas, volamos por avion alquilado a $16 por persona a pasar dos dias en Punta Pescadero, cerca de 60 millas hacia al norte, administrado por los norte-Americanos Stuart y Mavis Bartelson. Este centro esta en una area como jardines rodeandolo en un promontorio mirando hacia el mar. Queda como a ocho millas desde la carretera pero los Bartlesons dicen que ellos no tienen planes para mejorar el camino de tierra que los conecta con la carretera y podrian continuar confiando en comercio aereo.

Punta Pescadero tambin tiene una pista privada de aterrizaje y barcos por renta. Existe una alberca y playa, salon social y un informal cuarto comedor.

La mayoria de los centros de recreo en esta area operan de acuerdo con el plan Americano-cuarto y tres comidas diaries. Tarifas son de $40 a $50 por dia, cuarto doble, un poco mas caro durante la temporada de turismo.

Precios por barcos de renta son de $80 por dia hasta por cuatro personas quienes llevan su propio equipo y carnada. Si el capitan del barco provee el equipo y carnada la cuenta puede llegar hasta $120.

Sorprendentemente, mientras las aguas locales abundan en pescado, la carnada preferida para el marlin-pez volador-es importada del Sur de California y cuesta de $1.25 o mas cada uno, dependiendo en la temporada.

The Philadelphia story—what makes Rizzo run?

By H. D. QUIGG
UPI Senior Editor

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Frank Lazzaro Rizzo, the rampant mayor here, is a charming man. So charming that his enemies tell you he is charming. It's a word they all use. Also charismatic.

And one enemy, in a sly choice of words, calls him "formidably handsome." After that, it gets somewhat rougher. Such as: "Frank can be an awfully nice guy—if you're gullible."

An observer without political connections says: "He is a very charming man. He can walk into a room of Rizzo-hating liberals and they will all like him when they leave."

"I don't want to use the word charisma," another says. "The thing is that he has an attention getting factor—big, powerful. He has biceps that look like my legs. And he utters great oneliners, the best I've ever heard."

The question is, can he charm the voters again? Despite a recent spell of political hell and high water up to the part in the middle of his straight black hair, the only big city mayor ever to take a lie detector test now says he's going to run next year for a second term.

A good many experts think he can make it. His enemies say no way; he's through in this town. One reason that those who favor him give is that the Democratic organization, with which Rizzo has been squabbling, doesn't have anybody of stature to put up. And Rizzo has power, even though he has lost his last few bouts with the "boss," Peter J. Camiel.

At 53, the mayor is a charging bull of a man, 6 feet 3, 245 pounds, ham-handed, big-boned, rollicking, profane, with a roguish sense of humor that comes across with flutter and zap, like a fast ball.

He flunked his lie detector test a year ago. But what the hell, his supporters say, it probably was rigged. The test came after Camiel, the Democratic City Committee chairman who has been called one of the few remaining "bosses" in American politics, charged Rizzo had offered him a political patronage deal. Rizzo denied it.

The test, set up by the Philadelphia Daily News, indicated that Rizzo lied in the denial, that Camiel told the truth.

Thacher Longstreth, the Republican whom Rizzo beat in 1971, looks at the present scene this way: "Most of Rizzo's constituency believe the lie detecting machine was wrong, or was not working. Or else: 'They screwed our Frank.' His re-election is going to be quite similar to last time.

"I never thought the Republicans would defect in such numbers. I only got 30 per cent of the Republican vote. The city is still very uptight on black-white confrontation. The tone has leveled off, but there is sufficient white ethnic strength still with him. He is the commanding general to them. And the Democratic leaders don't really have any hot property to run against him."

Despite Camiel's defeat of Rizzo in almost every bout of the Democratic internal fighting, Longstreth believes that "Rizzo is far and away the most powerful man in Philadeplhia—more powerful than the next 10 men combined."

Rizzo ran on a law-and-order platform, has advocated return of the death penalty for "maddog killers," and was the vocal apostle in Philadelphia of "middle-class anger." A risen-from-ranks policeman who became police commissioner, he always has been accused of brutality, always been an incredibly flamboyant figure engaged in a series of confrontations.

And as for those one-liners, he does have a way with words.

A few months ago, telling a reporter he was in a conciliatory mood on the embattled Democratic front, he said: "When I raise my arms, doves fly out of my armpits."

When he had a fracas with a former supporter, a prominent banker of small physical stature, he said: "You tell that little ——if he doesn't behave himself I'll eat him up like an hors d'oeuvre."

When declining, on first becoming mayor, to pay for a piece of sculpture that had been commissioned by the city: "It looks like a bunch of plasterers had come by and dumped their load." Most of his constituents agreed with him.

And of the lie detector test: "They corrupted the incorruptible machine."

Philadelphia is 2 to 1 Democratic. "Probably the strongest Democratic bastion in America," one politician puts it. Rizzo had been a Republican. But as a mayoralty candidate in 1971 he sensed that the blue-collar Democrats were his men.

"I'm a Democrat, and I'm going to run in 1975 as a Democrat," he told UPI in an interview. This means tackling the Camiel slate in the primary. Camiel is unrelenting in his enmity toward Rizzo.

A blue-eyed, past-60, political veteran of 40 years who is of Polish extraction but looks Irish, Camiel spoke bluntly of Rizzo: "He is interested in one thing: amassing power. He bored in and tried to take over both political parties. I said no to him time and time again in his attempt to dictate the candidates.

"In the election last year, Rizzo did everything to harm the Democrats. He is a traitor to the Democratic party and its principles.

"He is not a Democrat, not a Republican. He is a Rizzocrat— and that is the way of all dictators. Because of Rizzo's sorry record, I will oppose him. He parroted his love for President Nixon. In the 1972 election, he said Nixon was the greatest President the country ever had. Rizzo represents something evil in government. I despise the man for what he represents."

Rizzo has been equally blunt in the past about Camiel, the man whose organization supported him in 1971. Now he says only: "When Camiel and Tate and Schwartz rap me, I'm pleased. If they said I'd win, I'd be concerned. I'd wonder what their objective was."

James H. J. Tate is the twice-elected former mayor who made Rizzo police commissioner and supported him for mayor. He says his big break with Rizzo, just after the latter took office in 1972, was when he endorsed Nixon.

City Council President George X. Schwartz says: "In two and a half years, Rizzo has succeeded in getting his tentacles into every agency, every board, every commission. Through appointment of members, he has made them a patronage heap. He's got absolute control."

For 20 years, Rizzo's personality has impinged on Philadelphia; for eight years, observers say, his personality has dominated the city. He has captivated the hardhats. And business. Longstreth, who heads the Chamber of Commerce, says: "There is no question that he has been the best mayor for business in my lifetime."

However, as one friend says, "Since he became mayor, his ego growth has overcome his political acumen." A freshet of embarrassments beset him. There was the lie detector in August, 1973.

Then, in November, he supported 12 Republican candidates. They lost. Camiel's men won. Rizzo called him a dictator. Earlier in the year, newspapers disclosed Rizzo had a 34-man special police unit that had been intensively investigating Camiel and Schwartz This spring, Rizzo tried to wrest control of the party. Camiel won by a 48 to 21 vote of ward leaders.

Rizzo, who grew up in a very tough Italian section and whose father was a cop on the beat there 43 years, was asked in the interview about his law-and-order stand.

"I'm supposed to be a hard-nosed cop," he said. "I became a hard-nosed cop because of where I worked. I was a cop 28 years. I worked the toughest areas. I've been there and back. I'm for human rights. A policeman's job is mostly helping people.

"But when you talk to me about criminals I get hard-nosed because I've been there, within minutes, and seen the broken bodies. They pick on old gray-haired people to stab and rape. I'm so fed up with the misplaced compassion—and it's getting worse. You kill, you rob, you rape, and you become a hero.

"Misplaced compassion. And they go into country clubs. They violated the rules. We didn't."

Asked if it was partly pride that made him want to run again, he replied: "Sure, I'm proud. And I made it. In what other country could a guy like me make it?

"I'm the second Italo-American in the city to make police captain, the first to make police inspector, the first deputy commissioner, the first police commissioner, and the first to make mayor. I'm very proud of that. All I hear is Mafia . . . Mafia . . . it makes the hair on the back of my neck stand on end. I'm very proud of my heritage."

A native Philadelphian Rizzo supporter said: "I admire the guy. He's the best police commissioner we ever had. He's honest. If I ever found his hand in the cookie jar, I'd be shocked and surprised."

Another, who thinks Rizzo will win, said: "He got too big for his britches. He's a fascinating figure, and he can do a lot for the city—a strong man—if he would just mend his fences and straighten out."

TOUGH MAYOR — Frank Lazzaro Rizzo says he is going to run for mayor next year for a second term. His enemies say he can't possibly win.

$50 million for state coast sites

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — An appropriation of $50.4 million to buy state seaside recreation sites passed the Assembly Natural Resources and Conservation Committee Wednesday.

The bill (SB907) by Sen. Randolph Collier, D-Yreka, would shift the money from the state Beach, Park, Recreation and Historical Facilities Fund to the Department of Parks and Recreation.

The measure passed 6-0 to the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

None of the funds would be available without state Park and Recreation Commission approval and review by the state Resources Agency.

PORLAMAR, Venezuela (UPI — A Venezuelan airliner slammed into a mountain top and snapped in half Wednesday while flying blind through the edge of a tropical storm over the Caribbean resort island of Margarita.

Only one of the 48 persons aboard survived.

The co-pilot, Ivan Magallanes, was carried down Piache Hill mountain and was taken to a Caracas hospital with multiple injuries, authorities said.

Business world

Launching the beginners

By LEROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) Unless you want to take on a franchise and follow someone else's idea and operating blueprint, starting your own business is a tough proposition for the average American today.

Inflation, soaring interest rates and a depressed and stagnant stock market have aggravated this situation in the past year.

But a group of people from Harvard Business School and Massachusetts Institute of Technology have done something about it.

With some seed money from the government and substantial capital raised from private sources, they started three years ago to create the Institute for New Enterprise development, which not only raises funds to finance new small businesses with good profit potentials, it conducts seminars in strategically located areas to give young men and women who want to start a business a sophisticated view of the problems and pitfalls.

Up to this point, the Institute has started five new small businesses, all doing well so far.

It is holding workshops for interested people this month in Lexington, Ky., and Minneapolis and later in the autumn in Atlanta and New York City.

The institute has its headquarters at Belmont, Mass. The executive director is Brian Haslett, educated at Oxford and Cambridge and trained in both British and American business.

The five small businesses it has helped to start so far (there are a number of others in the works) are:

Outdoor Venture Corp. at Stearns in the Appalachian region of Kentucky, a tent manufacturer. Job Start, a London, Ky., community development corporation, put up $220,000; First National Bank of Oneida, Tenn., granted a $300,000 line of credit and the managers of the little company raised $130,000. This venture earned $25,000 net profit on sales of $780,000 its first year and paid off its start-up costs. It provided jobs for 50 persons previously unemployed and the first nine months sales were 45,000 tents. This year its sales will about double and it is enlarging its plant.

Phoenix Products Inc., of Tyner, Ky., which makes kayak boats. It was started for only $125,000 in equity capital and a $50,000 bank loan. It is making money after only four months in business with sales running at a rate of close to $500,000 a year.

Driltech, Inc., of Gainesville, Fla., which makes rock drilling equipment for the phosphate industry and expects sales of $6 million in its second year.

The other two companies are Briox Technologies, Inc., Worcester, Mass., which makes a medical oxygen generator for use by patients with emphysema, and Delta Typesetting, Inc., Greenville, Miss., which runs a computerized typesetting service.

Haslett currently is traveling around the country interviewing almost 500 persons who have applied to attend the institute's seminars this summer and fall. From the 500 he will choose 90 whose ideas and capacities seem to promise success.

"Many people start businesses who shouldn't," Haslett says bluntly. "Nine out of 10 business casualties are due to managerial inexperience or ineptitude and failure is a very costly experience for the new entrepreneur and his family as well as for his employes and his backers."

So the institute ruthlessly chooses only the most promising of those who seek its help. "There is plenty of capital available even in today's tight money conditions," Haslett said, "but only for new enterprises that look exceptionally good to the investor and foundations and government agencies."

No fees are charged for the institute's worshops although each one is taught by 15 to 20 experts who normally are quite high priced. Those allowed to attend must pay their own transportation and personal expenses.

The workshop covers a full weekend, starting Friday night and running Saturday from dawn through late evening. It's a veritable cram session that enables each person attending to really evaluate this business idea and his own potential for founding a successful business.

Haslett emphasized that having a good idea for new business brings no assurance that a person has the intuitive skill to carry it out. And even if he does have native capacity, he still needs knowledge and a certain amount of experience to avoid the pitfalls that lead to failure.

The Institute is located at 375 Concord Ave., Belmont, Mass 02178, telephone 617-489-3950.

Super money managers now 'out of the market

NEW YORK (UPI) — Forstmann-Leff Associates of New York, money managers for the super-rich and pension funds, have been 90 to 95 per cent "out of the market" since the Arab oil embargo hit last October. But they see some hopeful signs for the future.

While conceding that Arab militancy has "changed our whole economic life," J. Anthony Forstmann and Joel B. Leff feel the recycling of the millions being sucked into the Middle East will supply some financial grease for Western economies.

Other hopeful signs, they say, are the new technologies coming along to increase productivity, expanding trade with Russia and China and "an inevitable improvement in the national psyche" once the shock of Watergate disappears.

Forstmann, 36, who studied at Columbia and Yale, and Leff, 39, who won degrees at Harvard and the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania, opened shop in 1967 with $3.5 million under management.

Today, they handle more than $150 million for such blue ribbon names and firms as Pfizer, members of the Ford family, Holy Cross, the Association of American Advertisers and Doyle Dane Bernbach Advertising.

Over the last five years (1969-1973), Forstmann - Leff has shown an average compunded yearly gain of 22 per cent in investment partnerships. For the same period the Standard and Poor's 500 index had an annual gain of 4.2 per cent and the Dow Jones, 3.6.

"We presently are breaking even," Forstmann said. "But even that's a plus considering the losses some are taking. We're about 5-10 per cent in the market, mostly oil and some IBM picked up when it hit 200. The rest is in short term obligations. That's where we'll sit until we have cleared market visibility."

Does the firm see a recession or depression in the wings?

"Let's put it this way," Leff said. "The great depression of 1929 was an explosion. Today, we're walking through a financial minefield."

Both men place great investment value on major economic, political and sociological changes.

On Oct. 28, when the Arab oil embargo hit, they sold out their market holdings.

"We reasoned this way," Forstmann said. "We were then, in effect, a blackmailed country. While nobody can predict the future, we did know that blackmail is not conducive to good P-E multiples."

"We just don't believe there is any sacrosanct area of investment," Leff said. "There are areas which at specific times for specific reasons provide investment opportunities. We try to find them. We have, at all times, a high anxiety level because we get paid to be right."

They charge a minimum fee of 1 per cent annually, calculated quarterly, on average assets under advisement.

Both partners believe investors will have to show faster footwork in the 1970s because they shape up as years in which the economic environment will become more and more managed. There will be times, they say, when the smart investor will be "totally out" of the equity market. They pointed out that such government policies as tight money and wage and price controls squeeze corporate profits. In such times, says Forstmann, the market can be an investor's minefield.

Asked if his firm handles Ford money because he recently married Charlotte Ford, Forstmann said, "Hardly. They're the last people in the world to trust their money to anyone who doesn't perform."

Swiss push keeping fit

GENEVA (UPI) — Karl Oldini told everyone that as far as he was concerned, Swiss people were physically in a mess. So he decided to help them get back into shape.

Oldini, the head of the City Forestry Department in Zurich, thought up the idea of a physical fitness exercise track to run through the woods outside town. It would be open to all, at no cost.

Appropriately, Oldini went to a life insurance company with his idea.

That was in 1967 and today there are 90 such tracks around Switzerland.

The VITA insurance company supported Oldini, now 58, and won the interest of physical exercise equipment manufacturers.

One-Two Miles

VITA Exercise Tracks range from one to two miles in length. They all have 20 stopping points, each with exercise equipment such as parallel bars and instructions for their use depending on the age and physical condition of the user. You alternately run or trot between each exercise point.

The Institute of Social and Preventive Medicine in Zurich University has made a study of the tracks and their usefulness, finding them both a success and a disappointment.

"The track provides exercise for the whole body and offers an ideal possibility to improve bodily resistance and health," the Institute said.

So far so good.

It was also found that the vast majority of track users have office jobs, in line with another original aim.

Fit Get Fitter

On the other hand most of the users are healthy already and go out on the tracks to remain fit. People considered by Oldini to be in a physical mess seem to want to stay that way.

Oldini also wanted to get middle-aged and older people out to help prevent heart ailments but 41 per cent of users are between 21 and 30 years old and only 35 per cent are over 36 years.

"The older generation has far too little idea of how important sport is for health," the Zurich University report said.

Many more men than women use the tracks—75 per cent of users are male; 59 per cent are married couples who go out together.

The study showed that half of participants had a higher education up to and through university.

Smokers unfit

More than half—51 per cent— are non-smokers and a further 13 per cent smoke only rarely.

Market Responds weakly to Ford pledge to quell rampant inflation

By EDWARD CRAIG
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market found scant inspiration this week in President Ford's announced determination to quell inflation.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost the gain it had rolled up the previous week, marked by the departure of former President Nixon and Ford's accession to the presidency. It ended the week at 731.54, down 45.76.

The President's speech Monday night to a joint Congressional session dealt in broad terms with his determination to do something about rampant inflation. The following day the market responded in a small way to the speech but the vigor soon dissipated.

The President called for reactivation of the Cost of Living Council to monitor prices and wages, and a bipartisan approach to curb inflation.

Lucien Hooper, analyst for Thomson, McKinnon & Auchincloss, said Wall Street "would have found more assurance in the speech if he had been more specific."

"Where do we go from here?" asked Saul Smerling, analyst for Standard & Poor's. "The basic problems remain..."

The basic problems, of course, were soaring inflation and high interest rates. Wall Street, like the rest of the country, would be heartened by a cooling of inflation because of its positive impact on the economy. High interest rates have drawn money away from the auction market. As one analyst put it, "If people can get a better return for their money elsewhere, why should they put it into the market?"

Some analysts saw no market recovery in the near future.

Mrs. Rosemarie Pavlick, analyst for Harris, Upham and Co., suggested the Dow would slip to the 700 level before the market makes its next broad move. Joe Generalis, analyst for Shearson, Hammill & Co., saw no end to the current bear market for possibly another 16 weeks.

The renewal of fighting on Cyprus was a mild depressant and reports that Turkey would abide by a U.N. ceasefire were an inspiration, equally mild.

The market offered no noticeable reaction to the week's skimpy business news, which included a Commerce Department report of a slowdown in retail store sales. The department also said the U.S. balance of payments dropped sharply during the second quarter. Business loans at 12 major New York banks were up $24 million, about a third of the figure of the week before.

Of the 20 most active stocks, all but one were lower. The exception was Homestake Mining, in sixth place on volume of 401,500 shares. It gained 10 ½ to 67 ¾.

Most active was Polaroid, down 1 ⅞ to 24 ½ on 723,700 shares, followed by Evans Products, off 1 ⅜ to 4 ⅞ on 479,900. Sony Corp. was third, down ⅛ to 6 ⅛ on 450,600 shares. Part of the weakness in Evans was Moody's withdrawal of its rating for the building materials firm's commercial paper.

Of the 1,954 issues on the tape, there were 1,544 declines, 229 advances, with 181 unchanged. There were 425 new lows, 17 new highs.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 5.19 to 75.67.

Yes because when I go to bed when I'm supposed to I can't go to sleep and I stay up all night anyway. My brother keeps me up all night. I might as well be watching TV.

Mike Davison

Chino

Yes and no. They should be allowed to stay up late on a special movie like John Denver and McCloud. And they should not stay up late when they have school and when they have to take the trash out.

Eric Wilkins
6th Grade
Chino

Yes, I think I should stay up later. Only till 10:00. Because I like to watch the TV. Most children don't have a TV to watch so they half to go to bed early. In summer I want to go to bed sometime after 9:00. In winter the same. I am 10 years old. My brother is 7 years old. I should stay up later than him.

Valerie Romero
Claremont

Yes, I think children should be allowed to stay up late. Because if they are watching a good movie, their parents make them go to bed, and they never know what happens at the end of the movie.

David Peltz
Upland

NO & YES.
NO, because then they'll be grumpy in the morning to get up in the morning to go to school.
YES, because all the scary movies are on late, and I'd be talking to my friend and tell her to call back in 15 minutes and in 5 I'm already in bed.

Stacey Rogers
Age 11
Chino

No, because they go to bed as sleepy as a bear and wake up as sleepy as a bear. Then they start right in angry and yelling at everybody. Then they lay back down & wake up two hours later, late for school & gripe at their mother for not waking them up.

Because of housing costs:

Many familie now making improvements on old homes

NEW YORK (UPI)—If you can't buy the house you want, improve the one you have.

That seems to be the solution for many homeowners who need or want to upgrade their living quarters but just can't swing it with today's soaring housing costs and tight mortgage market.

The American Bankers Association (ABA), noting a remodeling boom is underway as it becomes more difficult to finance the purchase of a new home, says funds for home improvement still are available.

"Since your home is your collateral, you may borrow up to 90 per cent of your equity in the house," Rex J. Morthland, ABA president, said.

"Interest varies from bank to bank —from about 12 to 15 per cent —so it pays to shop for the lowest rate. Repayment periods extend from 5 to 10 years."

Generally bank financing is less expensive than working with a home improvement firm, Morthland said. A passbook loan, a loan guaranteed by other collateral, borrowing on insurance all are possibilities.

Morthland suggested several ways to undertake a remodeling project. You can go to a home improvement firm that will handle the job from beginning to end, including the planning, financing' construction and finishing. You can arrange your own financing, work out your own plans or have a prodessional do it for you, and let contracts for as much or as little of the work as you choose.

While few families will want to handle a major remodeling project on a do-it-yourself basis, many will find they can cut costs by doing some of the work themselves. Just be sure, Morthland warns, that you consider carefully your abilities and the time you are willing to invest in do-it-yourself. And make certain all improvements conform to local building codes, especially electrical and plumbing work. Non-critical jobs such as preparation and clean-up, finishing chores such as painting and papering installing moldings and panelling, laying floor tile are more time consuming than challenging, he said, but still represent a substantial reduction by the homenwner.

Morthland stressed the need for care in choosing an established contractor whose ability and reputation are well known. "The home improvement field," he said, "attracts its share of fast-buck operators who pressure customers into agreeing to more than they need and who fail to live up to their promises. Recourse through the courts is a headache, expensive and not always successful."

In choosing a contractor, look around, inquire of friends who have had work done. Check local banks, chamber of commerce, better business bureau. "You may," Morthland said, "without feeling unduly suspicious, ask a contractor for references and check on work he has done.

It pays to get at least two and preferably three (some banks require three) written estimates, with each based on the same written specifications, Morthland said. "There may be a considerable difference even among reputable contractors depending upon their overhead, size of their sales force and how much their suppliers charge them for materials. Bear in mind the lowest bid may not always be the beset choice, especially if it is far below the others."

If you are sure your contractor is experienced and honest, Morthland said, you may be better off heeding his advice about building materials, fixtures, appliances and possible substitutions because of shortages in order to avoid construction delays and possible price increases.

On major projects, it may pay to hire an architect, if you can find one who will take on the job. In addition to the rewards of professional design, often his fee will be made up in savings made possible by his knowledge of materials and construction and his supervision of the job as it proceeds.

At any rate, Morthland recommends, be sure to keep close watch on the work while it is in progress to make certain it is being done to specification. Don't harass workmen on the job, but do discuss with the contractor any questions you may have. Remember it is expensive to change your mind after work has started. Make any changes in the planning stage.

Morthland advises, "It is good planning to limit yourself to those improvements which will increase the resale value of a house, or for which added livability for your own family makes the cost worthwhile, even if you should recover nothing on resale.

Adding a new room or central air conditioning," he said, "probably will return full cost. You probably will realize about 75 per cent of the outlay for modernizing existing rooms and 50 per cent or less for such things as a swimming pool or patio."

Remodeling costs, like everything else, are rising these days. "It is estimated that putting off a job until next year could boost the cost anywhere from 10 to 50 per cent."

Families moving into Lewis development

Families have begun moving into newly completed homes at the Lewis Homes-Upland development located near San Antonio Avenue and 21st Street in Upland.

"And with the finishing touches now being applied to a number of additional homes we are now able to offer still more families occupancy before school starts," said Edward J. Lynch, sales manager.

The development is labled Prestige Series because of the large floor plans and decor refinements. The project has 32 single family homes with 20 already sold.

The one and two story homes, priced from $44,550 to $52,950, feature four bedrooms, two or three bathrooms and three car garages. They also have wet bars, double door entries, fireplaces with log lighters, self cleaning ovens and wall-to-wall carpets.

The garden kitchens have ceramic tile counters, color coordinated built-in equipment and instant hot water dispensers.

Would you like to own your own castle, complete with a moat and drawbridge?

There's one being offered in Fox River Grove,, Ill., which bears a price tage of $175,000.

It was constructed by Theodore Bettendorf as a replica of an ancient medieval fortress he played in as a child in his native Vianden, Luxembourg.

The project, which took 36 years, was completed before the builder's death in 1967.

The castle was then purcsased in 1968 by Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wren, antique dealers. They rented it during the next six years to honeymooners.

Recently finding the burden of maintaining the castle and running an antique shop too great, they contacted the Previews, Inc., realty firm to sell it.

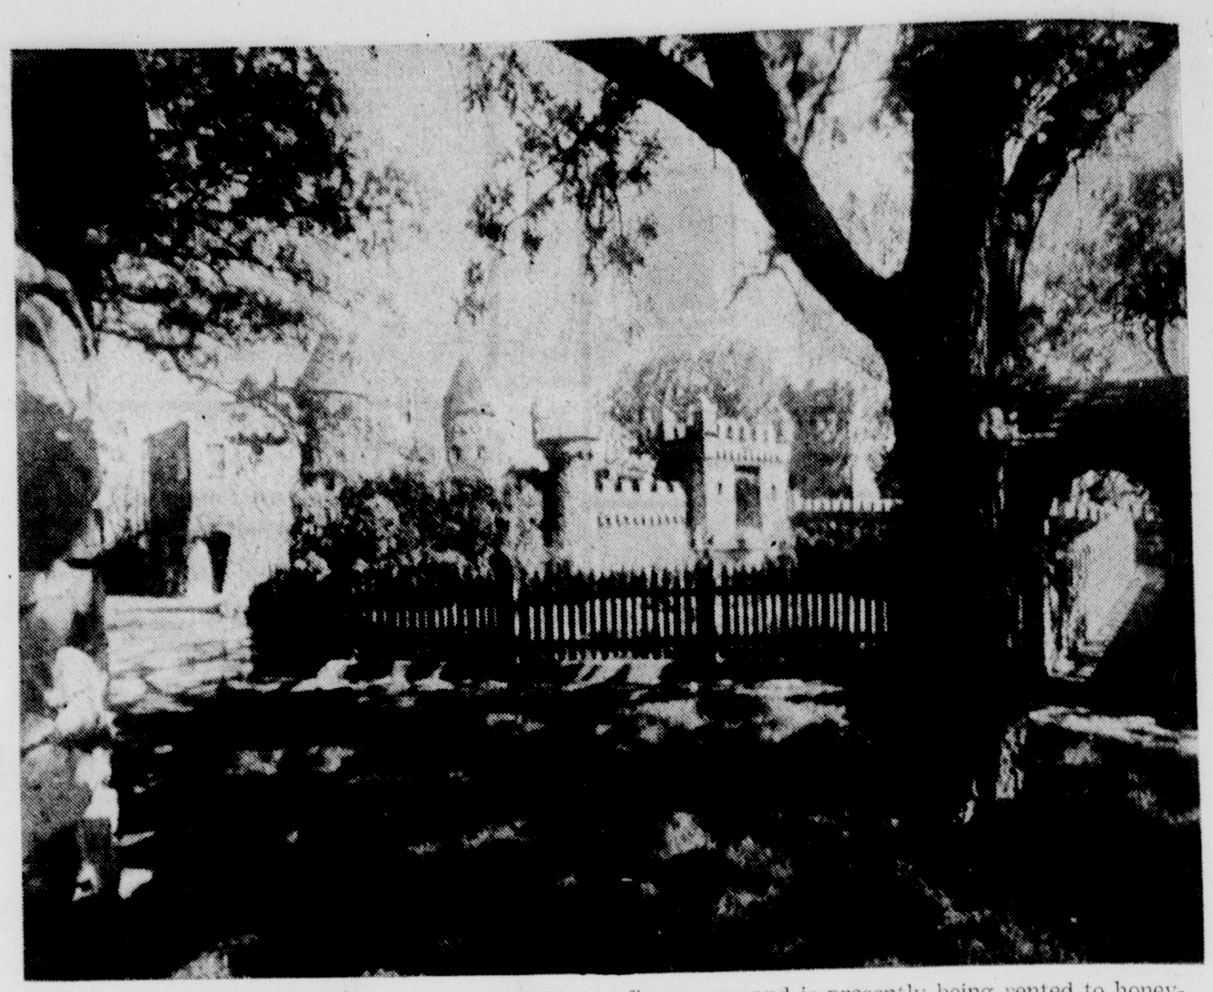
Enclosed by stone walls, the castle contains five rooms. The upper level has a living room with walnut paneled walls, exposed beam ceilings and fireplace.

For those romantic candle lit dinners, there is a dining room for two which measures 6 by 11 feet. The castle's single bedroom is spacious and has an unusual bath where two of the four turrets are used for a shower room.

The lower level contains an authentic Knight's Hall, complete with a turret holding a suit of armor. Used as a recreation room, it has a bar, decar peneling and an alcove with a game table.

The Wrens have modernized the castle by adding central air conditioning, a stereo system and modernizing the kitchen.

Besides the moat and drawbridge, the exterior has turrets, gnarled oak trees, flower garden, stone walls, archways and wishing well.



FOR SALE — The "Bettendorf Castle," located in Fox River Grove, Ill., is a miniature replica of a medieval fortress in Vianden, Luxembourg. It contains five rooms and is presently being rented to honeymooners. Built by Ted Bettendorf, it is now offered for sale.

CHICAGO (UPI) — This year's Gross National Hot Dog is estimated at 1.51 billion pounds, according to sausage industry sources.

The figure, contained in Hot Dog Fact Sheet, means Americans will consume 15.1 billion red hots this year.

The fact sheet also includes just about anything anyone could want to know about hot dogs. For example, the average five-inch sausage contains about 150 calories and five to seven grams of protein.

It also notes how the hot dog got its name.

Though in existance since the late 1600s, the wieners got dubbed "hot dogs" in 1900 when a New York concessionaire began selling them from hot water tanks and venders were coached to shout "get your red hot daschund sausages."

Sports Columnist Tad Dorgan liked the idea and created a talking sausage cartoon. But he had a tough time spelling daschund, so he simply called the character "Hot Dog."

New mortgage relief bill wins support

The National Association of Home Builders has asked Congress to pass a bill introduced by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., which would provide for emergency mortgage relief for middle income families.

Appearing before the Senate Housing and Urban Affairs sub-committee, John C. Hart, vice president of the 75,000 member builders organization, expressed support for the bill that would direct the Government National Mortgage Association to make commitments to purchase FHA, VA and Farmers Home Administration mortgages by lenders at a 7 per cent rate.

He said builders would like to see the bill broadened to also include conventional mortgages.

Hart also supported the concept of the Emergency Home Finance Act which is aimed at providing housing for middle income families caught up in the credit crunch and for stabilizing overall housing production.

He suggested some amendment is needed to make this bill operable at less than the regular FHA interest rate which is now 9 per cent. This rate, said Hart, would exclude many middle income home buyers.

The official called attention to the depressed state of the home building industry, which he said is largely a result of monetary policies of the Administration in its efforts to combat inflation.

"Another blow has been dealt to housing by the issuance of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of high-yield short term flexible notes by bank holding companies," he added.

"The limited amount of residential mortgage funds now available just can't stand this kind of assault."

Car pool saves

STAMFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Officials at the firm Pitney-Bowes say a commuter who drives 30 miles roundtrip to work can save $328 a year in gas and lubrication costs by joining a four-man car pool.

The company also estimates a driver could thereby save 2,046 gallons of gas.

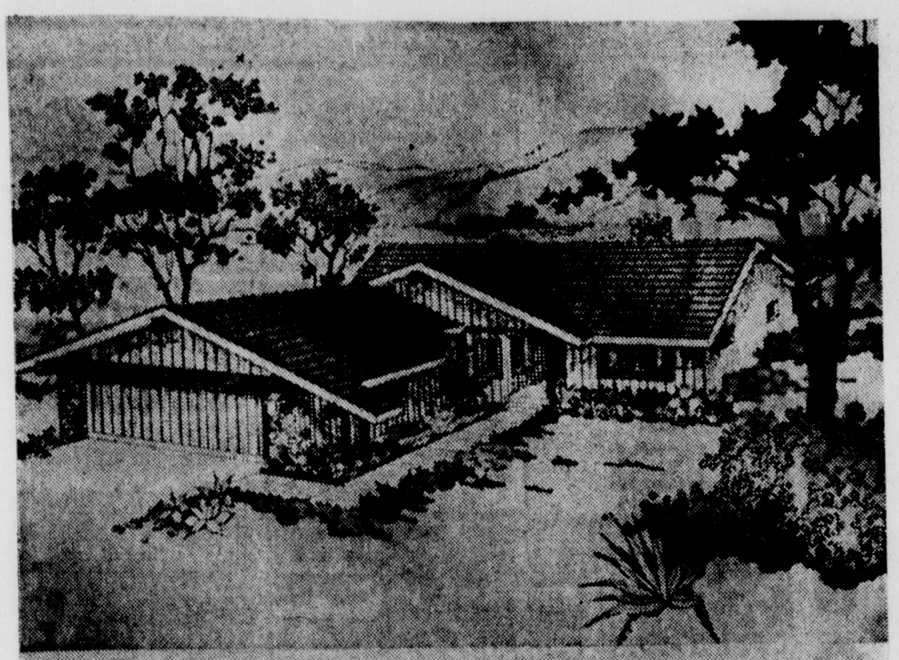
Housing



Narrow home designed for a small lot

By HIAWATHA ESTES

When designing a home, there are many advantages associated with locating one of the bedrooms on the opposite side of the plan from the bedroom wing. This isolated bedroom can then be utilized as a den, library, or as a private bedroom for guests or other members of the family. It is also a plus feature if the bath serving this separate bedroom can be made accessible to another area of the house as it is here.

This home can boast of an unusual amount of storage area. Each of the bedrooms have large wardrobes. Opening to the halls are an extra wide linen, a general storage closet, a furnace closet — the furnace could be located in the garage if you prefer to utilize this storage space for some other purpose — a guest closet and a broom closet. A pantry is in the kitchen along with numerous other base and wall cabinets. Each of the baths features a pullman lavatory with storage below and there is even an extra linen closet in the family bath. Wall cabinets are above the washer and dryer.

More space has been allotted to both the kitchen nook and the dining ell than one usually finds in a home of this size. If extra space is required to seat a large group in the dining area, the table could be expanded into the living room.

To obtain a maximum of privacy, the living area is at the rear of the design. Sliding glass doors open from the living room to the patio.

A roofed porch which leads to the entry and the center hall protects visitors from the elements. The entry will be flooded with sunlight through the stationary glass panel at the entry.

Complete working drawings for plan 31184 can be purchased for only $12.67 for the first set and $7.42 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until December 18, 1974. Please allow two to three weeks for delivery. A specification booklet is available for $1.06. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is avilable for $1.06. The following home plan books are also availabe: Distinctive Homes — $1.59; Prize Homes — $1.59; Hallmark Homes — $1.59; Town & Country Homes — $1.59; Homes by Hiawatha — $1.59; Ranch & Modern Homes — $2.39. All six books — a $10.34 value — for only $8.22. Orders for less than three books, please add an extra 20c per book for postage and handling. Prices include sales tax. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-PO, Northridge, Calif. 91324.

Few institutions sought special mortgage funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. William R. Cotter, D-Conn., says that only a handful of Connecticut lending institutions took advantage of an offer of about $3 billion in federal funds to help ease the tight home mortgage market.

Cotter said Saturday a total of six mortgage lending institutions took advantage of the $3 billion offer announced last May through a special "forward commitment program" by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

He said his own investigation indicated that the state institutions "were either asleep at the switch when the program was announced May 17 or for other reasons were reluctant to participate."

As a result, Connecticut institutions will get only $13.6 million, or less than .5 per cent of the $3 billion, Cotter said.

He said based on population, Connecticut should have received about $43 million to help fund mortgages on new houses, in contrast, Utah, with only one third the population of Connecticut, received $60.5 million, Cotter said.

Texas took advantage of the offer, collecting more than $300 million with only 5.3 per cent of the population and California, with less than 10 per cent of the population, was given $534.6 million, Cotter said.

The Democrat said New York, like Connecticut, failed to take advantage of the program and got only $19.4 million instead of an available $260 million.

"It is clear that we lost a golden opportunity to pump millions of dollars into our stagnant home building industry," he said.

Cotter said he has Thomas Bomar, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to explain why the financial institutions in Connecticut "which have been complaining loudly about their lack of lendable funds," failed to take advantage of the government offer.

Seminar on commercial leasing, appraising scheduled on Aug. 29

An educational seminar on the topics of appraising commercial property and commercial leasing will be held Aug. 29 at Griswold's Restaurant in Claremont.

The all day session, open to the public, is sponsored by the California Real Estate Association and the 26th District education committee.

Realty board members may earn a unit of credit toward the Graduate, Realtors Institute (GRI) certificate and designation.

Speakers will be Mort Crystal, a real estate appraiser since 1961, and Ken Kneale, vice president of Cushman & Wakefield and a member of the Los Angeles Realty Board.

"This is an opportunity for real estate practitioners to broaden their knowledge and understanding of their profession," said J. Stan Heckmer, district education chairman.

"The course features advanced materials designed to help Realtors and salesmen who already have a good working knowledge of the real estate business but want to learn more, especially new techniques for helping their clients."

The registration fee is $15 which includes course materials, examination, coffee service and luncheon. Registration begins at 8:45 a.m. For more information, persons may contact the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors, 665 N. Garey Ave., Pomona. The telephone number is 623-1607.

But not close

First Lady's former mate: still friends

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The new First Lady's first husband says he still is a good friend of both President and Mrs. Gerald Ford, but not too close.

Asked recently by San Francisco Chronicle columnist Herb Caen whether he had sent congratulations when the new president was sworn in, William C. Warren replied:

"Well, we're not THAT good friends."

Warren married the former Betty Bloomer in Grand Rapids, Mich., "back in the late 30s, or maybe it was the early 40s ... you know how time flies . . . I was fresh out of U. of Michigan"

"We were married, oh, about seven years," he was quoted as saying by Caen

Warren, remarried, lives in both San Francisco and Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, and represents "several furniture lines."

He concluded his talk with the columnist by remarking, "Look, I'm not giving out any interviews on the subject of Betty Ford, OK?"

Caen noted the last remark was made pleasantly.

Awards given for listings and sales

Three members of the Pomona Valley Board of Realtors have been presented awards for realty sales and property listings during July.

They are Mre. Claire Fullmer, greatest number of listings, Mrs. Helen Babcock, largest single sale and Cleon Cravens, greatest number of sales.

Each was presented a sales award at a Pomona Valley Board of Realtors' multiple listing service breakfast held recently at Griswolds Restaurant in Claremont.

Mrs. Fullmer, employed by the Wheeler-Steffen Real Estate firm, has been involved in real estate sales in the valley for the past 10 years.

Mrs. Babcock, who has owned her own business for the past five years in Claremont, has been in real estate sales for 10 years.

She is active in church work and various real estate organizations. Mrs. Babcock and her husband, Emmett, have two daughters.

Cravens is associated with the Canfield Real Estate firm in Pomona. Following graduation from Garey High School, he attended Citrus and Mt. San Antonio Colleges. He and his wife, Debi, reside in Pomona.

Not pennies from heaven, but a C-note

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — For a 9-year-old Connecticut girl, that old song "Pennies from Heaven" is cheap stuff She got $100 from the sky.

The UCLA geophysics department said Thursday that it paid the $100 to Susan Leson of Stratford as its standard reward for discovery of a meteorite. The golf ball sized chunk of metal fell onto the street near her while she was playing kickball near her home.

But don't go rushing out to look for windfalls from the sky, says William V. Boynton of the geophysics lab. "There are an average of five recovered meteorite falls per year around the world," he said, so the odds of finding one are remote.

Carrasco: demise of 'El Senor'

By JAMES L. OVERTONE
and
ANDREW H. YEMMA

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) —By 8:30 the hectic day had faded and a full moon rose through the clouds scattered above the walls of the Texas State Penitentiary.

The light played across the red brick walls and into the courtyard beneath them. The scent of roses drifted from beds near the warden's office.

In the moonlight a stocky man stood at a window of the prison library. He looked at the courtyard below and checked the blue .357 magnum at his belt. He shifted the bandolier slung across his new sports jacket and turned from the window.

It was Saturday night, Aug. 3, 1974.

Quickly Fred Gomez Carrasco, 34, Rudolfo Dominguez, 27, and Ignacio Cuevas, 42, bound their hostages to a tall rectangular box made of blackboards reinforced with law books and binding tape.

Three were cuffed to each side and one to each end.

Four others —three women and a priest, handcuffed to the gunmen —got into the box and the contraption began rolling out the library door and down the concrete ramp.

It was 8:45 p.m. and when 15 minutes had passed Carrasco and Dominguez lay dead, yards short of the armored car they had hoped would lead them to freedom. Hostages Elizabeth Beseda and Julie Standley were dead. Father Joseph O'Brien was severely injured. Cuevas was back in the custody he left 11 days before.

The longest confrontation with inmates holding hostages in the history of American prisons had ended.

Carrasco, of San Antonio, was an outlaw from his 16th year. He was said to have killed 50 men. Some put the number at more than 100. He was in and out of prisons in Texas and Mexico. He was called "El Senor" —respected and feared on both sides of the border.

Then, in the summer of 1973 he was hunted down by lawmen seeking to destroy his multimillion dollar heroin smuggling operation. Carrasco was ambushed at a San Antonio motel, wounded and captured.

He admitted to a charge of assault to murder a police officer in return for the dismissal of a similar charge against his wife, Rosa, and sentenced to life in prison.

He entered the Texas State Penitentiary on Jan. 3, 1974, still limping from wounds suffered in the San Antonio shootout. He walked with a limp and a cane and because of his wounds was assigned as a porter to Father O'Brien.

For months he worked "carrying holy water," running errands and planning his escape. Prison officials believe he may have smuggled the three escape pistols in through O'Brien's mail.

Finally, at 1 p.m. July 24, less than seven months since his imprisonment, Fred Gomez Carrasco made his move toward freedom.

No one saw them coming, but Carrasco and his confederates burst into the educational section and fired a single shot as the 1 p.m. whistle blew.

"I was at the back of the room and I saw Dominguez come across the schoolroom floor with his gun drawn and so I walked over to Mrs. (Elizabeth) Davis and I said, 'Don't do anything rash. Don't run or get upset, but there's a man over there with a gun'," said Ron Robinson, a Conroe, Tex., teacher. "I knew at that point we were in serious trouble."

The three inmates put themselves into position around the large room. Someone shouted that there was a disturbance in the library and four guards started up the ramp toward the door.

"As soon as they were in view Carrasco fired four shots at them and wounded one of them in the foot," said Robinson. "I think he purposely did it just to scare them off and not to kill them, because I think he could have killed them if he wanted to."

The guards retreated and the courtyard was immediately cleared, but Carrasco, Domingueez and Cuevas held 12 civilians and 50 inmates at gunpoint in the library.

Texas Department of Corrections Director W. J. Estelle Jr. was speaking at the San Antonio Rotary Club when the 1 p.m. whistle blew. He cut short the speech and returned to Huntsville.

Before he arrived Carrasco had released all but four of the inmates and Father O'Brien, released because of his station but a voluntary hostage now, had begun relaying messages between Carrasco and prison officials.

"He figures he can shoot his way out," O'Brien said. "He said he's serious and he means it."

His demands were soon known. Carrasco wanted three M16 rifles and 3000 rounds of ammunition, three bulletproof vests, three bulletproof helmets with visors, three walkie-talkies, and suitable street clothing.

"His demands are not asking for reform or program changes," said prison spokesman Ron Taylor. "They're asking to get out of here."

Carrasco put it a different way.

"I'm not the type of man that can be put behind bars," he said. "I don't have no intentions whatsoever of serving my time."

"We have a policy that no prisoners with hostages will be released," stated Don Kirkpatrick, assistant director of the Department of Corrections.

From that day positions in the 11 days of negotiations never really changed. It was a terrible time for the hostages.

"There were individual moments in which each of us cried," said Ron Robinson. "There were individual moments in which each of us prayed and were terrified. And there were moments in which we literally had to be together as a group to comfort and sustain each other."

They sang and told jokes and a lot of time was spent talking by telephone with prison officials, relatives and newsmen. And they developed a certain relationship with their captors; a certain respect for Carrasco, a complex, determined man.

"He was calm, cool, collected and extremely purposeful," said Robinson. "There were occasions when he blew his cool, lost his temper and was angered. On occasion he became extremely agitated with Mr. Estelle and wouldn't speak to him."

For Carrasco, after the initial takeover, it became a battle of bluffs and options, a poker game as he told the hostages.

"Look, this is like a poker game," he told them. "You are our chips. We are going to apply pressure. From time to time we have to apply pressure to get what we want."

On July 25 the hostages were lined up against a library wall and Dominguez, described as the most bloodthirsty of the three, panned along the line with his .38 special held in both hands.

When he reached Robinson he fired and the teacher slumped to the floor.

"Oh my God, they've shot Mr. Robinson," screamed Novella Pollard, 46, to prison officials listening by telephone.

"I lay there," Robinson recalled. "I said 'this is what it must be like to be shot. But I'm still alive. I must be wounded.'

"My face was very wet. I put my hand to my brow and expected to draw a handful of blood, but it was perspiration."

The bullet had hit the wall near his head.

Dominguez hoisted him from the floor, ripped his shirt at the left shoulder and soaked it with ketchup to make a fake wound. It was all meant to impress Estelle that the inmates meant business.

Prison officials had placed sensitive listening devices beneath the library and into the electrical wiring.

"They had Spanish-speaking people listening to everything that was said," Robinson said. "It was just like they were there after they got the bugs in place."

Glennon Johnson, 51, who suffered a heart attack the first night, had been the only person to leave the library since the inmate hostages in the first hours.

But before dawn Monday, July 29, inmate hostage Henry Escamilla, a quiet man who wore dark sunglasses, plunged wildly through the glass library door and bleeding profusely, rolled and crawled to freedom.

Twelve hours later Aline House, 61, a librarian, complained of chest pains and after a brief negotiation, she was released to a hospital where she recovered.

Later in the week Carrasco seemed to sense a stalemate and developed new techniques of terror. He began mixing the contents of library chemistry sets and threatened to explode a bomb attached to one of the hostages unless his demands were met.

"Meet my demands," he said, "or prepare for war."

After that negotiations for the first time were seriously concerned with transportation for Carrasco, Dominguez, Cuevas and four hostages out of the prison.

On Friday, Aug. 2, a heavy thunderstorm poured five inches of rain on the prison, pounding the walls and running in rivulets through the courtyard.

By then the plan was set, but Carrasco, fearing that prison officials were not clear on it, sent hostage Linda Woodman out with a detailed explanation.

The 11th and final day began in silence.

The box, dubbed the "Trojan Taco," by hostages, eased down the ramp, around a corner, around another and onto the final decline to the courtyard.

Halfway down the box was hit by a powerful blast of water from three fire hoses thrown over the red walls.

The gunmen realized that a rescue attempt was underway and they began disposing of their hostages.

"I was shot right away," said Father O'Brien who was wounded in the chest and arm. "I'd say the first, second or third shot."

Robinson said he believed Carrasco immediately shot Mrs. Beseda, who died with a bullet in her chest, and Dominguez killed Mrs. Standley with four bullets in the back. Cuevas shot O'Brien and Mrs. Pollard fainted pulling Cuevas down inside the box where he lay still.

The gunmen traded shots with lawmen for several minutes and then realized they would never make the blue and white armored car parked across the courtyard.

"When they realized they were down to the last round, that they were handcuffed to a body and there was no question of reloading, they turned the guns on themselves," Robinson said. Cuevas eventually gave up without injury.

When the first blasts of water hit the box the hostages outside fell beneath it and were escorted away to safety.

Robinson said his first look at freedom was a Texas Ranger who stepped in front of the box.

"He stood about six-feet-five and was about 45 years old," he said. "He had iron gray hair and steel blue eyes. He didn't have an ounce of fat on him and he had two of the biggest .45's I've ever seen in my life.

"I saw that Ranger with his two pearl handled .45's and he was beautiful."

Caseless bullet inventor working on machinegun

LA HULPE, Belgium (UPI) — As a young boy, Jules Van Langenhoven extracted powder from discarded World War I cartridges to fashion his own bullets. Old machineguns found lying around became his playthings.

Guns and bullets have been a part of the Belgian inventor's life since. His invention of a caseless bullet, being manufactured by Daisy-Heddon, the American BB-gun firm, could possibly revolutionize the weapons industry because it is powderless and has no brass shell to expend.

"Nobody learns in a school to be an inventor," Van Longenhoven said in an interview. "That's impossible. You are a born inventor or you are not an inventor. And that's the difference.

"It's in your blood. Research is in your blood. I cannot stop."

Van Langenhoven, 64, lives with his wife in a modest house on the main street of this small village, 10 miles southeast of Brussels. When he's in the United States—and that is often —he lives in Rogers, Ark., 100 miles east of Tulsa, Okla., where Daisy has its plant.

The inventor started work in 1957 on a prototype bullet that could be fired by compressed air and leave no residue in the barrel or chamber.

"I found a bullet with a case was a waste of time and money," he said. "I did it for myself. I've been studying for a long time. There were some mistakes — that's normal. I blew up some guns—that's normal. But I don't give up."

In 1961, Van Langenhoven went to Paris to see Cass S. Hough, president of Daisy-Heddon. He showed the air-gun executive how his new bullet worked and Hough was so impressed he wrote Van Langenhoven a personal check on the spot, made him a partner and flew back to Rogers to begin research.

In 1968, the first marketable guns were ready, and Daisy began manufacturing 1,000 of them a day.

The Daisy system—called V-L after the inventor's initials—works this way:

The bullet is inserted into the breech and the rifle cocked like any ordinary air rifle. Triggered, a piston drives the air forward into the compression chamber, causing heat of up to 2,000 degrees Fahrenheit to ignite a nitrocellulose mixture attached to the base of the projectile.

The gas then fires the bullet at a speed of 1,150 feet per second, making it slightly more powerful than a .22 caliber slug. It is capable of penetrating a tempered steel plate a half-inch thick.

What is remarkable about the V-L is that it leaves no cartridge case, primer or smoke. Everything goes out the barrel or is dissipates as gas. In addition, the bullet costs about a hundredth that of the powder type.

The Daisy rifle is for sport. But would the V-L system work for war weapons?

"Oh, yes, I'm sure of it," Van Langenhoven said. "Right now I'm working on a machine gun for an airplane. For the same weight you can double your shooting power. And that's very, very important."

But Langenhove does not believe it will happen soon.

"It's difficult to change people," he said. "Ammunition with case is classic. You can't change people. For me, though, I hope it happens as soon as possible."

BULLET INVENTOR — Inventor Jules Van Langenhoven holds a Daisy V-L air gun and a packet of caseless bullets. His invention of caseless bullets could revolutionize the weapons industry because the bullet is powderless and has no brass shell to expend upon firing.

KOALAS

A KOALA IS A SMALL AUSTRALIAN ANIMAL THAT LOOKS LIKE A LIVE TEDDY BEAR. THE KOALA'S NAME IS AN ABORIGINE WORD THAT MEANS "NO DRINK," FOR THE KOALA NEVER DRINKS WATER. IT GETS THE MOISTURE IT NEEDS FROM ITS ONLY FOOD, THE LEAVES OF EUCALYPTUS TREES.

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

STEVEN CARTER OF PLAINVIEW, TX. ASKS:

"HOW DOES THE SOUND COME FROM A RECORD?"

© 1974 by NEA, Inc., 8/18

A PHONOGRAPH RECORD STORES THE VIBRATIONS OF SOUND IN TINY WAVY LINES, OR GROOVES. THE WAVY LINES REPRESENT THE SOUND WAVES THAT WERE MADE BY A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT OR BY A PERSON'S VOICE. AS THE RECORD SPINS, THE PHONOGRAPH NEEDLE FOLLOWS THE WAVY LINES AND VIBRATES IN EXACTLY THE SAME WAY. THE NEEDLE SENDS THE VIBRATIONS TO THE PHONOGRAPH'S LOUDSPEAKER. THE VIBRATIONS CAUSE A SPECIAL CARDBOARD CONE IN THE SPEAKER TO VIBRATE. THE VIBRATING CONE PRODUCES SOUND WAVES IN THE AIR JUST LIKE THOSE THE PERSON MADE WHEN HE FIRST SPOKE INTO THE MICROPHONE.

JOHNNY IS SENDING WORLD ALMANACS TO: PAM PARSONS, BEDFORD, NH; ROBERT MOSS, CHARLOTTE, NC; EMILY CANTER, LONGVIEW, TX; JOEY LEGER, DOTHAN, AL

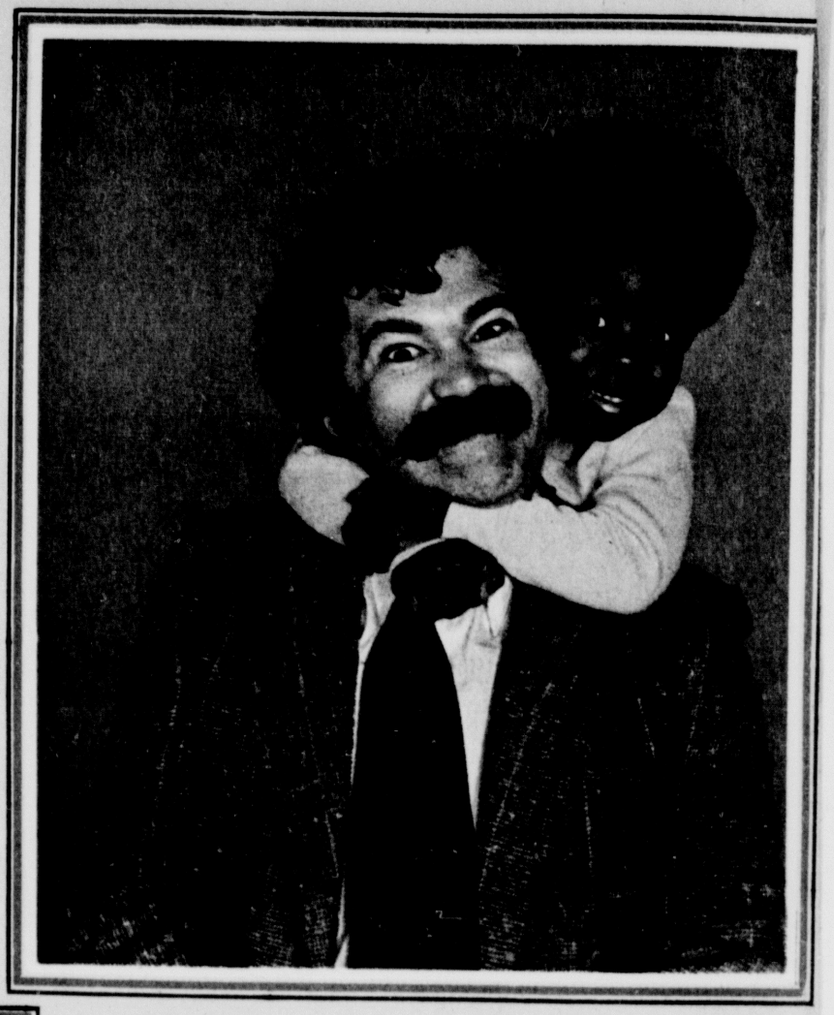
'GLOBETROTTER ANTICS'

Eleven of the famed Harlem Globetrotters will be featured in "The Harlem Globetrotters' Popcorn Machine," a new children's series to air on CBS this fall (Saturdays at 11AM). The live-on-tape half hour will also feature Rodney Alley Rippy, the 7-year-old live-wire "superstar" who will join in the fun to advance important pro-social messages such as good behavior, good health habits, adhering to rules in the interest of safety, and showing respect. All are presented in musical and comedy features laced into theme-based jokes, sketches and songs. The guest list for the season reads like a "who's who" of TV—including such stars as Esther Rolle of Good Times, Ted Knight of the Mary Tyler Moore Show, Sandy Duncan, Jim Backus, Ruth Buzzi, Arte Johnson, Marty Feldman, and comedian Avery Schreiber, who will also be a regular on the series.



'TO DANCE OR ACT'

Rue McClanahan, co-star of Maude (on CBS, Mondays 9PM this fall), knew by the age of 12 that she wanted to be an actress or a dancer. She took dancing lessons and by the time she was in high school she was teaching dancing as well as performing. Her first professional drama credit was "Inherit the Wind," at the Erie (Pa.) Playhouse, where she worked for two seasons. After attending Pasadena Playhouse on a scholarship, she spent four years in Los Angeles appearing in some low budget films and occasional television roles. When she got her equity card, she won the role of Hazel in the musical "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," and received good reviews from the critics. In 1966 she returned to New York for the role of Lady McBird in the controversial off-Broadway hit "MacBird." In 1968 she appeared on Broadway in "Jimmy Shine," then a year later, performed off-Broadway in her favorite play "Who's Happy Now?," for which she received an Obie Award. Producer Norman Lear saw her performance in "Sticks and Bones," and invited her to Hollywood for a guest star part in All in the Family, and while here, she auditioned for the part of Maude's best friend for the then-proposed Maude series. Rue still takes voice and piano lessons.

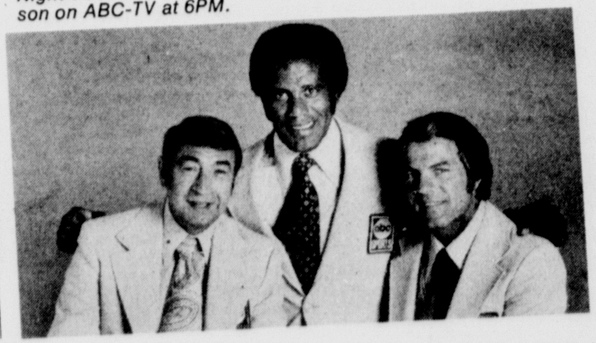
Howard Cosell once again will broadcast NFL Monday Night Football, along with Frank Gifford and Fred Williamson on ABC-TV at 6PM.



COVER CLOSE-UP

A NEW SEASON OF FOOTBALL

ABC, the only television network regularly offering live coverage of both the best in NCAA College football and NFL Monday Night Football games, plans to provide extensive and innovative game action when the college and pro seasons begin this fall. The regular season for the collegians on ABC kicks off on Saturday, September 7, as Tennessee goes against UCLA at Knoxville. Two days later, on September 9, ABC Sports will televise the first Monday night football game in NCAA history, Notre Dame, the 1973 champions, at Georgia Tech.

Both Notre Dame's Fighting Irish and the Crimson Tide of Alabama, ranked first in the nation prior to the Sugar Bowl last New Year's Eve, will appear at least twice on the 1974 schedule, which will also include the first-ever Thanksgiving Friday doubleheader.

There will be a new look to the NCAA telecasts as well. Three-time Sportscaster of the Year Chris Schenkel will serve as host for the programs, operating from a studio in New York City, and functioning in much the same capacity as he has during ABC Sports' coverage of the past two Olympics. Keith Jackson, last year's Sportscaster of the Year, will handle the play-by-play reporting, and he will be assisted by the most expert of expert commentators—each week one of the nation's leading football coaches will share Jackson's announcing booth. ABC has already signed coaches of the caliber of Ara Parseghian, John McKay, Darrell Royal, Pepper Rodgers, Joe Paterno, Paul "Bear" Bryant and Frank Broyles.

In addition to Jackson and the "Coach of the Week," each NCAA telecast will feature a new concept in football coverage: a college-age reporter who will put in perspective not only the games themselves, but the spirit of the colleges involved, their students, their faculties, their players and their coaches. Throughout the college season, ABC Sports' schedule will remain flexible to offer viewers the best of match-ups, and some TV games will not be selected until the Monday prior to the airdate.

A special feature of ABC's NCAA football will be an extraordinary doubleheader on Saturday, November 23, in which Big Ten co-titlists Michigan and Ohio State will try to break their 1973 tie game deadlock prior to the Pacific Coast Conference's battle of the titans, UCLA and USC. In post-season action, ABC Sports will televise four Bowl games—the Liberty Bowl on December 16, the Astro Bluebonnet Bowl on December 23, the Gator Bowl on December 30, the great traditional Sugar Bowl on New Year's Eve, December 31 and the Hula Bowl on January 4.

Turning to the professional ranks, ABC Sports will follow up its five pre-season tilts with an expanded schedule of 14 "NFL Monday Night Football," telecasts beginning September 16, when the Oakland Raiders go against O.J. Simpson and the Buffalo Bills. All eight playoff teams from last season will appear on the 1974 schedule, with six of them appearing twice. Three of the critical late-season games will pit playoff teams in head-to-head competition: Cincinnati, the AFC Central Champion, at Super Bowl Champion Miami on December 2; Washington at NFC Western Champion Los Angeles on December 9; and, in the added game, a special Saturday night telecast on December 14, Dallas, the NFC's Eastern Champion, will visit Oakland, the AFC's Western titlist.

The Pro Bowl, featuring the All-Stars from each NFC Conference, will become a regular ABC Sports fixture as the result of a new four-year NFL-ABC contract. The Pro Bowl will become a night game for the next four seasons, with ABC televising this post-season classic this season on Monday, January 20.

The 28 teams to be seen on ABC's "NFL Monday Night Football" this year (many play more than once on the schedule) represent a combined 221 NFL victories in 1973 against only 150 losses, a percentage of nearly .600. On the subject of winning combinations, popular ABC Sportscasters Frank Gifford, with play-by-play, and Howard Cosell, with expert commentary, will form the nucleus of this season's NFL broadcast team. The third member of the "NFL Monday Night Football" troika is television actor Fred Williamson.

FOR CLORIS LEACHMAN

Is Cloris Leachman your real name?—B. McKeen, Parkersburg, W. Va.

● It is. Josh Logan tried to change it to Jean Clayborn when I did "John Loves Mary" for him years ago, but it turned out there was already a Jean Clayborn, so it was changed to Amy Clayburn. A few days after I got the part, the author objected and had me replaced by Nina Foch. I became the understudy. When Nina got sick, I replaced her again. Before I went onstage, the stage manager appeared before the audience and said, "Ladies and Gentlemen, the part of Mary will be played today by—." He hesitated, turned to me in the wings, and asked, "Just what name do you go by?" And I burst out, "Cloris Leachman!" So I went back to my old name.

FOR KAREN MORRISON, Miss U.S.A., 1974

Some Women's Libbers feel that contests like the Miss U.S.A. contest are demeaning to women. How do you feel about that?—D. R. Johnson, Austin, Texas

● I believe that every girl who enters a contest like this becomes more of a woman!

*FOR WAYNE ROGERS, starring in "M*A*S*H"*

What do real doctors think about your TV show?—T. R. F., Ft. Knox, Ky.

● You should read some of the letters we get! Some of them say we don't go far enough. They think that we should see what they are doing in the operating room. Only the network won't let us go too far on the air.

FOR MARLO THOMAS

What are you doing now that your Broadway play, "Thieves," has shut down?—Rich Laekmer, Paramus, N.J.

● "Thieves" is still running on Broadway, and seems set for a long run. I know why you think it closed. The night I won the Emmy for "Free to Be . . . You and Me" I was so excited. I meant to say, "The producers closed the show down for the night so I could be here." In my confusion, however, I only said: "The producers closed the show."

FOR GEORGE WEIN,

founder and president of the Newport Jazz Festival

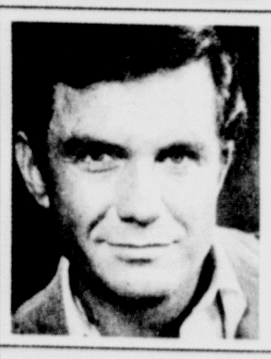
What do you think of the audiences who flock to see rock groups?—Thomas Moore, Durham, N.C.

● I think they aren't interested in music. A rock audience likes to feel a concert is a celebration of their culture. For them a rock concert becomes an enclave outside the law.

FOR DINA MERRILL

Can a person acquire the ladylike appearance that you have if she is not born with this quality?—J. B., Owensboro, Ky.

● To acquire a look that is different from your own requires a knowledgeable eye and the ability to mimic. Pick out a person that you want to emulate and try to observe that person's hair, makeup, clothes and general demeanor and then make up your mind to become that person. This is the way I adapt myself to something that is foreign to me, and I think it would work well for you.



FOR CLIFF ROBERTSON

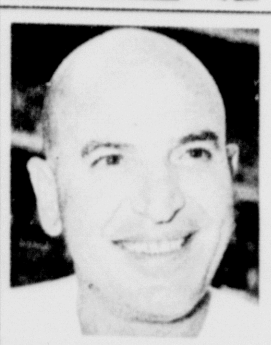
Why do you still live in New York when most of your work is in Hollywood?—Anne Seeger, Buffalo, N.Y.

● That's a very good question. I really don't like living in New York City, and I've been trying to talk Dina [wife, Dina Merrill] into moving away. She did suggest Beverly Hills as an alternative, but that's a bit plush for me. We've compromised temporarily on Palm Beach, although I don't call that much of a compromise.

FOR ROBERT REED

Why are your hairstyles different in your two series roles—as Adam Tobias of "Mannix" and as Mike Brady of "The Brady Bunch"?—Mrs. Robert L. Dorsey, Port Arthur, Texas

● I feel that, in real life, police detective Tobias, a serious guy in a serious business, would probably differ in several ways from easygoing Mike Brady—one of them being the way he wears his hair. For another thing, I think it is less distracting for viewers.



FOR TELLY SAVALAS

How did you get into show business?—Kelly Travis, Crossroads, Miss.

● I got started strictly by accident. When an actor I recommended for a part didn't show up for an audition, I went in his place as a joke and got the part.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

Do all the superstar actresses behave like big shots on the movie sets and like to be waited on—or do they do things for themselves?—Karen Bartley, Fayetteville, Ark.

● Director Gilbert Cates is well qualified to answer your question. He has directed Faye Dunaway, Joanne Woodward and Natalie Wood and says that what these three actresses have in common is that "they all apply their own makeup, and like to take care of their own clothes, because 'if you want something done well, you must do it yourself.'" He says the attitude of stars has nothing to do with their professional status. In other words, he has worked with minor performers who behave like temperamental prima donnas—yet some of the big names of show business are undemanding, understanding and try not to make waves.

We Asked These Celebrities:

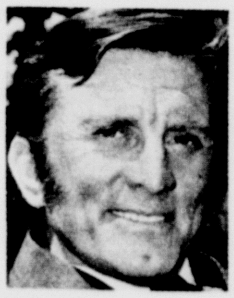
Do Men Need Liberating, Too?

Compiled by Alan Ebert

Women's Lib leaders frequently say that they are not trying to liberate just women, but men, too. How do men feel about this? Do they think they need to be "liberated"? FAMILY WEEKLY tried to find out by asking these eight male celebrities what they thought about the subject. Here are their replies.

KIRK DOUGLAS

"I have mixed feelings about liberation, both men's and women's. Many women are currently paying the price for their so-called liberation: loneliness. Many a woman is liberating herself right out of her man's bed. Women, and men, need to expend more energy in making interpersonal relationships more meaningful. What is more liberating than being yourself with another person, than sharing a communion with them?



"Yet Women's Lib has caused some interesting developments. As women have become less romantic, men have become more so. They have also become softer. Good! Manliness is not a guy rippling with muscles, smoking a pipe and rapping out football scores.

"I do believe a certain liberation is taking place. Men are learning to be strong enough to show weakness. It takes strength to show softness, hurt, anxiety, doubt, fear—all of which men live with from time to time. Show me a man who is afraid to admit to this and I'll show you a man with a problem. Too many men bear the burden of their masculinity. They do not accept the feminine traits that exist in all men. These are the men—and there are millions of them—who do indeed need liberation."

DAN DAILEY

"I am not the Rock of Gibraltar. Never have been and never will be. And yet, from earliest childhood this role has been inflicted upon me—and that's the word, inflicted. Mainly by women! My mother urged me to be strong, dependable. I was raised to 'shoulder the burden' – not just my own but my family's. Be it wife, mother or children, everyone clings to the 'Rock.' Everyone grabs on to save himself or herself from drowning.

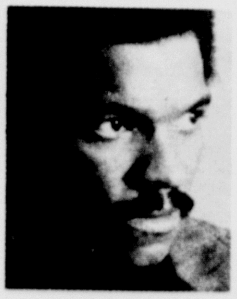
"The burden of accepting this role is just that—a burden. Often, men seek the 'Rock' status—the strong, silent image—thinking that this is what makes them manly. This is the kind of man who needs liberating. But equally often, women, even as they protest that they want equality and independence, view their men as ports-in-the-storm, the ever-present, ever-firm and sturdy 'Rock.'

"Not only is this unfair, it's damaging. Each man, in his gut, knows it is hard enough being the 'Rock' for himself."

BILLY DEE WILLIAMS

costar of "Lady Sings the Blues" and "Brian's Song"

"I enjoy being male and particularly enjoy being a man in the man-woman relationship. There is a certain amount of role playing involved in this that I wouldn't change. But I do believe there is a definite need for liberation, having to do with acceptance of one's total self rather than of specific facets.



"I believe in all man being woman, all woman being man. Woman's femininity is therefore man's, too. I accept that within me, accept that I am a combination of male and female. I understand more of the former than I do of the latter, but at least I'm no longer threatened by it.

"One of my many goals in life is to understand woman better. I believe that will lead to a better understanding of me. That, to me, is liberation: knowledge. That is what I feel many men lack, the ability to know and accept those parts of them they feel are not in keeping with the masculine image. These are the men in conflict, in need of liberation."

Pictorial Parade

"Often men seek the 'Rock' status, thinking that this is what makes them manly. This is the kind of man who needs liberating."—Dan Dailey (pictured with Mrs. Dailey).

DAVID SELBY

costar of "Up the Sandbox" and "The Super Cops"

"Look at the gray, dead faces of men who commute to their jobs every day and the need for men's lib becomes apparent.

Work is an integral part of a man's being. Fulfillment in it is as necessary as fulfillment in personal relationships. But so many men spend lifetimes dying, instead of living, in jobs they hate. Men with family responsibilities often feel they can't just throw up their hands and say, 'I will not do this work another day!' But I believe some men must do exactly that.

"A man who stays on his job because of family responsibilities brings his frustration, unhappiness and resentment home. Whether he admits it or not, he blames his family for his predicament. And the family suffers for this in some way. Selfish as this may sound, a man must please himself before he can please others.

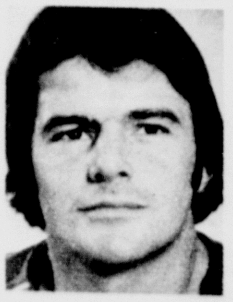
"Today, the world accepts it if a woman works to support her family. Since a marriage is a partnership, why not a role reversal wherein the man becomes the 'househusband,' the wife the breadwinner, until the man has found his thing?

"Many men still believe they should have only one career per lifetime—that a man should be 'complete' when he is 35. To that, I say nonsense. Life is filled with options. To be 'complete' is to be dead."

ROD GILBERT

hockey star of the New York Rangers

"A man can be warm. A man can be tender. A man can be gentle. He can also be a chauvinist. I speak from experience.



"I don't think it is unmanly to be soft. In fact, I think it takes strength to be sensitive to yourself and others. A feeling human being is the most appealing and attractive, regardless of sex. I believe most men hide their softer selves and thus rob themselves and others of the best part of their being. These men need liberation.

"A vote of confidence for chauvinism! I certainly don't want to stop any woman from realizing her full potential. But I expect the woman I marry to raise our children. Not me, her. I see that as woman's role, not man's. I see man as the provider and protector, and I don't want to be liberated from this stereotype.

"But that's me. I'm not advocating what I want for anyone else. No man should allow himself to be placed in any role he doesn't want, regardless of social pressure."

MICHAEL CAINE

"American men need to be liberated. They don't feel emotion, and if they do, they don't show it. Your culture demands that they don't. In England, a man who shows emotion, who cries if need be, is not frowned upon or looked upon as a phenomenon. Here, it would seem that any emotion expressed by a man other than anger would cause all those nasty little aspersions to be thrown at him.

"Yet actually, it is not American men who need liberation but the society that creates and nurtures this preposterous attitude about what masculinity is and what it isn't."

RICHARD ROUNDTREE

of "Shaft" fame

"Women are not the only sex hurt by male chauvinism. Men, till recently, have worn the burdens of their sex around their necks like so many chains. Being male in this country has been a burden and a bore. Strength, solidity, stability, security and skill in indoor and outdoor sports—those are the things that have been equated with masculinity. Softness, sensitivity, sweetness and sensuality have not.

"But the concept of what is male is changing, and I say hurrah to that. A round of applause for Women's Lib and for what it has accomplished for men! Men no longer need to pretend to be what they are not. They no longer need to measure themselves against society's outdated concept of masculinity. Today, a man can be all that he is and be it proudly.

"A man, this man, is a combination of traits. Sometimes I'm strong and other times I'm shy. I'm fearless and yet fearful. I'm a tiger and I'm a pussycat. In other words, I'm a whole human being with the full range of emotions, and that makes me feel alive!"

JOHN GAVIN

currently costarring in "Seesaw"

"Men have little or no equality in marriage. Traditionally, the man is the breadwinner, the one who sells his soul at the market each day. Why? Some men are not happy being assertive. Why is there no acceptance of a man who wishes to assume household duties while the 'little woman' punches the clock and competes for promotions if she chooses?

"I see even less equality for men in the unfortunate mess known as divorce. Women in most states are protected by law to the point of absurdity. A man is hanged before the jury meets. People automatically assume it is the woman who has been wronged. That's silly. And alimony is killing for a man. As laws now exist, he pays the rest of his life. Why? We all know it takes two to make any relationship work or fail. Alimony should have a cut-off point, and technically it should be awarded to men if the wife has worked while the husband has given her 'the best years of my life.'

"Finally, the custody laws are outrageous! Whether a woman is capable or not, she invariably receives the benefit of the doubt and the child. Why is a child better off with his mother? Why can't a man be both father and mother to his child if it is assumed a woman can play both roles?

"Liberation?
You bet it's needed!"

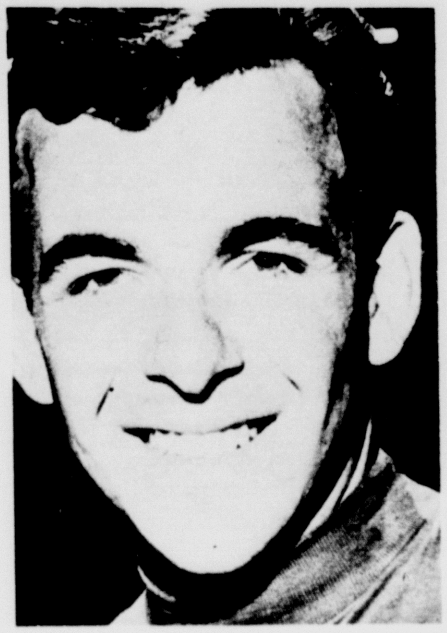
TONY JACKLIN:
From Oliver Twist to a Golf Millionaire



Tony Jacklin, the only Briton ever to win both the U.S. Open and British Open championships, has a background like Oliver Twist's. Jacklin was born into poverty in a mill town 175 miles north of London. He worried constantly about money and survival, but unlike Dickens' hero, Jacklin had golf to lift him up. "I still have a dread of being a failure, but at least I don't worry myself sick about money anymore," he says. His victories in both the U.S. and British Opens were worth about a million dollars to him. They also earned him an OBE from Queen Elizabeth. (OBE means "Officer of the Order of the British Empire" and is a higher award than the MBE given to the Beatles.) . . . Jacklin's truck-driver father never earned more than $35 a week. Tony dropped out of school at 15 to work in a mill, but was rescued by an attorney who gave him a job as a clerk at a local golf club. In the afternoons Tony practiced golf. He then answered a want ad for an assistant pro's job at a small club in London. He was soon playing so well that he decided to try his skill in the U.S. He joined the U.S. tour in 1968 and gained attention by winning the Jacksonville Open that year. "The Americans taught me how to keep my mind 100 percent on golf," he says: "You can't win a major tournament unless you learn to block everything else from your mind.". . . Jacklin, who is 27 and married, now has a big home in Elsham, England, and drives a Rolls-Royce. But he gives unstintingly to charity and serves as president of the Spastics Society and the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

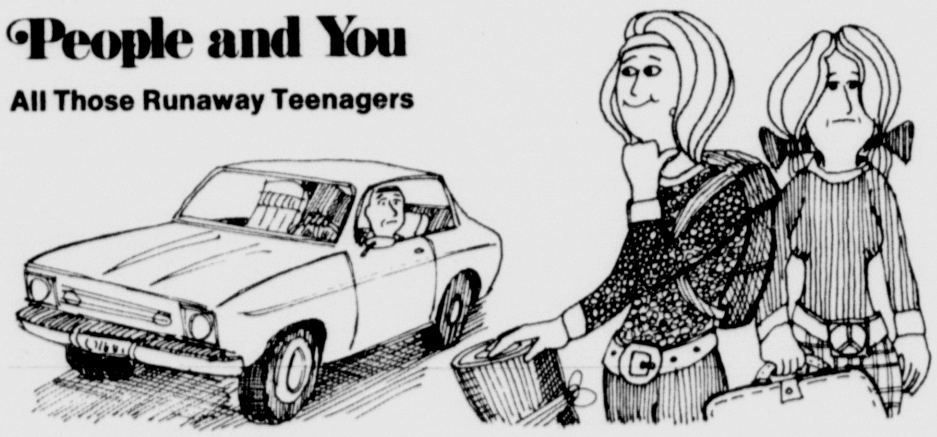
All Those Runaway Teenagers



During the 1960's, many parents were taught to blame themselves if their teenagers rebelled or ran away. Now a juvenile probation center in Massachusetts reports that this is not always justified. Assistant Executive Director Louise Homer, who made a detailed study of runaway girls, discovered there are two totally different types of runaways. (Though she only studied girls, she believes the same patterns may be true of boys.) One group fits the standard picture. These girls are running from unhappy relationships with parents. But twice as many runaway girls—two out of three—do not fit the stereotype! These girls are running to something. Those who run "to" something have no quarrel with their families. These runaways are seeking pleasure, sex, drugs, truancy, excitement, and they usually do not profit from ordinary psychological counseling when they're brought home. Unlike the "runaway from" girl, who usually sees things differently after counseling, the "runaway to" teenager often runs away again. Based on her organization's many experiments, Ms. Homer reported in a leading social-work journal that the best approach to these "to" girls seems to be live-in facilities that impose firm controls and enforce limitations—together with an active program of therapy.—By Shirley Sloan Fader

Is Your Child a "Secret Genius"?

By Virginia B. Warren

"Don't underestimate your youngster just because he gets poor marks, hates school, or because you have seen no sign of special abilities. Maybe you didn't know what to look for."

Contrary to popular opinion, all gifted children do not have astounding memories, read omnivorously or discuss Plato at age three. Some are actually slow in school. Albert Einstein was slow to learn to talk and to read, and hated school. Many superior youngsters are excellent dancers, good at sports, popular with their classmates—and flunk all their subjects.

Your child may get low or average marks and still have unique leadership ability, great problem-solving skill or be unusually original and creative.

How can you tell whether your youngster has hidden talents?

Charles E. Bish, former director of the National Education Association's Project on the Gifted and Talented, says to watch for these clues:

● Is your child noticeably popular with other children? Do they tend to do what he does, go where he goes? He has leadership ability. "All group-play activities reveal a leader," says Dr. Bish. "Kids have a sixth sense about this." But leadership does not always show up in the classroom. "It is not uncommon to find that a passive, unresponsive student in the classroom is elsewhere, through some miracle of transformation, an outspoken leader," says Arnold M. Gallegos, associate professor of education at Washington State University.

● Does your child use his toys in creative ways? For example, does he construct things for his train set instead of merely running the train around the track? Does he think of ways to make trees and buildings for the set? He may have problem-solving skill, originality.

● Does your child ask a lot of "reason why" questions? Why is grass green? What makes cement get hard? He has intellectual curiosity, one of the hallmarks of the gifted. Thomas A. Edison, described by one of his teachers as addled, with a weak, wandering mind, was a constant asker of "why" questions—which his mother answered carefully.

You can't always rely on a teacher's evaluation of your child's capabilities. Highly gifted children are often disliked by their teachers. Such children frequently have behavioral problems because they find school boring. Many have a highly developed sense of humor and keep their classmates laughing with their antics and quips.

Winston Churchill was described by his teachers as troublesome and "very naughty." He did poorly in every subject but English and history. His father felt that the boy was just not very bright.

Even extremely undesirable behavior may indicate intellectual potential. "Clever and ingenious ways of cheating on an examination or lying have been recognized as indicators of talents that, with wise guidance, can be developed into socially valued achievements," says E. Paul Torrance, professor of psychology at the University of Georgia.

Some children do poorly in school while ardently pursuing a special interest at home—drawing, making rock or stamp collections, becoming an authority on baseball scores, rock music or space travel. Concentration on such home projects often indicates unusual gifts.

To discover whether your child has ability in the arts, ask the people who teach him art, music, dance or drama. Torrance tells of a boy who was classed as a low achiever, not interested in school—a "no good." His arts-and-crafts instructor, however, described the lad as exceptionally gifted, with original ideas, and predicted a bright future for him as an artist or designer. This is often the case with black, Puerto Rican, American-Indian and Mexican-American children who, for many reasons, have difficulty with academic subjects.

So don't underestimate your youngster just because he gets poor marks, hates school, or because you have seen no sign of special abilities. Maybe you didn't know what to look for. He may be the Thomas Edison or Winston Churchill of tomorrow!

When I look at myself here, weighing 220 pounds, I wonder why my husband Cecil even wanted to put his arm around me.

Now that I am down to 138 pounds, Cecil is always taking pictures of me. And do I love modeling my new figure – and new clothes.

Now that I've lost 82 pounds, my husband needs an electric blanket.

By Janie Goff — as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

When I weighed 220 pounds, I was my husband's warmth in winter and his shade in summer. But now that I'm down to 138 pounds, Cecil says there'll be a lot of cold days ahead, even in our home town of Hattiesburg, Mississippi, if we don't get ourselves an electric blanket.

Fact is, Cecil is just not used to having me so slim. You see, I weighed nearly 170 pounds when we married 11 years ago. He used to say then I was pleasingly plump. But as I ate myself out of shape, he began saying I was unpleasantly fat. Only he'd say it different ways.

Like once he joked about putting chalk marks around my middle to show where his embrace stopped. Another time, he volunteered to go to the Army Surplus store to buy me shoes big enough to fit. And I'll never forget the time I threw a pail of water out the back door. I was so top heavy, I went with it right into a tree. Cecil and his brother had to pull me upright and they never let me forget it.

It was incidents like these that would put me to dieting drastically. Sometimes I'd eat only boiled eggs. Or I'd go on a low carbohydrate diet and deprive myself of all the things I loved — until I couldn't stand it any longer. Then Cecil and I would go off fishing and I'd take one cooler for the fish and three for the food. And that would be the end of that diet.

Wondering what finally jolted me into losing weight? My brother showed a home movie and I couldn't believe what I looked like, because mirrors don't tell you like a motion picture does. Right then, I decided to go on the Ayds plan as soon as I could get to a drug store.

Quite frankly, I had bought Ayds® Reducing Plan Candy before, but I didn't follow directions. This time, though, it was different. That movie made me determined to get the weight off. And since Ayds contain vitamins and minerals, but no drugs, I didn't need to worry about getting jittery or nervous.

One other thing. I didn't think about losing all 80 pounds, either. I just concentrated on taking off 10 pounds at a time. That way it didn't seem so hopeless. And you know what? It worked. I took one or two vanilla caramel Ayds before meals like the directions say and they helped curb my appetite so at the end of three weeks on the Ayds plan I'd lost 10 pounds. After that, I started losing about six pounds a month. I probably could have lost even more, but I made it a rule to go on an eating spree once a month. I shouldn't have, I know, but eating is a hard habit to break. And my spree kept me losing the rest of the month.

Cecil didn't think that I would stick to the Ayds plan at first. He was sure that I'd do what I always did — go off it and get bigger than before. But he was wrong. I got slimmer.

When I'd taken off 30 pounds on the Ayds plan, I found that I could wear a girdle on a hot day, go out, eat, and not get indigestion. And when I'd finally lost 82 pounds, I threw the girdle away and haven't worn one since.

There's one last thing I want to say for anybody who's struggling to lose weight. You can't get in a hurry to get it off. If you do, you just wind up looking like you need to go to a convalescent home. But on the Ayds plan you lose weight gradually, so your skin kind of takes care of itself. And you get healthier looking. Believe me, that Ayds plan has made me into a different person. And I wouldn't be back like I was before, for anything. Even though it means buying an electric blanket for Cecil.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

How Well Do You Know the Quirky World Of People-Pet Relationships?

True or False: People who don't like dogs usually don't like people very much either. (See number 2)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The reason a person chooses a particular animal for a pet is because he admires and identifies with certain of the animal's traits and characteristics.

2. People who don't like dogs usually don't like people very much either.

3. For a person who is troubled by inner conflicts, who finds it difficult to make emotional adjustments, a pet of some kind is frequently "just what the doctor ordered."

ANSWERS

1. True. Psychiatrist Marcel Heiman, who has made a study of the subject, has found that there are interesting differences among people who choose different kinds of pets. He observes, for example, that some people crave the closeness and warmth of a dog-master relationship. With others the opposite is true, and they prefer the aloofness and self-sufficiency of a cat. It's further observed that a woman who is not comfortable in too close a relationship with another person often lives alone. The pet she is likely to choose will be a cat—an animal that by nature lives an independent sort of life. Why? Because "the cat's independence lends strength to her own."

2. True—according to the findings of an Oklahoma State University study that was designed "to investigate the relation between man's reaction to dogs and to people." Subjects were men and women students whose varying attitudes toward dogs ranged from active dislike ("I guess people could call me a dog hater") through indifference ("I'm neutral—I can take them or leave them") to great affection ("I love dogs so much that some people might accuse me of being a fanatic"). All subjects were given personality tests to evaluate their attitudes toward and relationships with people. The team of psychologists who conducted the study reports its findings thusly: Results indicate that people who express little affection for dogs also tend to manifest little affection for people.

3. True. A leading research foundation has made a nationwide survey to evaluate the extent to which animals are used by psychotherapists in the United States and to classify the ways in which they serve therapeutic roles. The animal that is most often used is the dog, with cats running second. The most frequent use of animals is "as a vehicle for cultivating the positive nature of interpersonal relationships . . . and as an object to love and care about." That is, a person is encouraged to establish a meaningful relationship with an animal as a first step toward overcoming his difficulty in relating positively to fellow human beings. Other uses include having a dog do tricks for a child patient, to put him at ease and help to establish the necessary rapport with the therapist.

Buying a House?

Here's What Those Ads Really Mean!

Humor
By Ann Serb

Ready for another Sunday of house hunting? Good luck! And here's a handy dictionary, so you can't say we didn't warn you!

Reading real estate ads and then inspecting the property described give the house hunter a certain expertise in terminology. Here are some of the classic phrases used to describe homes – and what they really mean:

A Lot of Potential: nothing done for 30 years.

Handyman's Special: a retired carpenter with a fat bank account may be able to improve this place.

Overlooking the Park: every kid from miles around cuts through the yard.

Secluded Area: the closest store is three miles as the crow flies.

Honeymoon Cottage: the living room is ten feet by eight.

Cozy: the bathroom is four feet square.

Spacious: this barn features an enormous heating bill and requires a full-time cleaning crew.

Victorian Charm: the exterior paint job costs a bundle, and the tub is up on feet.

Needs a Little Work: there isn't a room fit for self-respecting mice.

Perfect for Large Family: combines the finer points of Spacious, Needs a Little Work, Victorian Charm.

Convenient to Schools, Stores, Transportation: the front door opens on the expressway.

1½ Car Garage: after the bikes and tools are put away, park in the driveway.

Picturesque, Overlooks Ravine: the ditch in back serves as the neighborhood dump.

Potential for 4th Bedroom: has a large, unfinished closet.

Upper Bracket: anyone asking how much can't afford it.

Executive: priced slightly under Upper Bracket.

Recently Decorated: all cracks have been freshly painted over.

Close to Everything: the house itself is an eyesore.

Lake Rights Included: sand and relatives everywhere all summer.

Seawall: front yard is disappearing fast.

Dramatic Lake View: waves smash against the windows.

Custom: weird floor plan.

Unique: see Custom.

Overlooking Golf Course: keep glazier's number handy.

Partly Landscaped and Sodded: owners ran out of money.

Rolling Lot: don't park in driveway unless emergency brake works.

Adjacent to Forest Preserve: picnickers will want to use the bathroom.

Private Lake: the backyard floods.

Concession for Quick Sale: owners want to move before collapse.

STOP DRIPPING FAUCETS "FOREVER" with stainless steel

U.S. Patent No. 3755876

If you want to permanently stop a leaking faucet, just changing the washer is not the answer (ask any plumber). The corroded and pitted brass seat chews up a new washer within a short time and you have to re-do the job. Until now, obtaining the correct seats with washers was difficult or impossible.

Our Vulcan universal seats are high grade surgical stainless steel. Because of their strength and resistance to corrosion, we offer a no-time-limit money back guarantee. These stainless seats are installed with a special tool supplied with the kit. They fit any faucet that uses washers because the Vulcan stainless seat mounts right in your old seat (you don't remove it).

The seats come with equally tough but resiliant mated Delrin® washers. One size fits all faucets because they don't use side support and therefore don't need to fill up your washer holder. The washers incorporate a special slotted design for easy, positive shut-off. The Delrin® washers also end the frustration of hot water shut-down caused by expanding rubber washers.

Unsolicited Spontaneous Testimonials
(available for inspection)

"I am more than pleased with both the method of installing and the results. This is the first time in three years I don't have either a leaking faucet, or one that swells and cuts off the hot water." I.M.C. Woodbridge, VA

"I have been using your Universal Faucet Repair Kit, and am amazed at the restoration of old faucets." H.W., Apt. Hs. Mgr. Seattle, WA

A New Steak Treat You Can Make In Minutes!

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen prepares flank steak with a new twist. Marilyn says, "A bottle of barbecue sauce and a few dill pickles can turn plain flank steak into a gourmet meal. Here's how...."

There's nothing to these Flank Steak Pinwheels—but to a hungry family or guests, they'll make a rare treat!

FLANK STEAK PINWHEELS

1½ lbs. flank steak, trimmed
1 bottle (1 lb.) barbecue sauce with onions and meat tenderizer
3 whole dill pickles

1. Brush one side of steak with barbecue sauce. Place row of dill pickles lengthwise down center of steak.

2. Roll steak tightly lengthwise. Tie with cord in several places.

3. Place steak in shallow dish; coat well with barbecue sauce. Cover; refrigerate at least 15 minutes. (One hour is best.)

4. Prepare outdoor grill or preheat broiler. Place steak on cutting board. Insert skewers crosswise through meat and pickles, about 1½ inches apart. Slice evenly between skewers to make pinwheels.

5. Grill or broil on rack about 4 inches from medium-high coals 5-7 minutes on each side (or until as done as you like), basting frequently with barbecue sauce.

6. Heat remaining barbecue sauce, serve with pinwheels.

THE WILLIAM B. HILTONS
A family man

"The Hilton's Hilton" is the way residents of Holmby Hills, Calif., describe the home of William Barron Hilton, 45, the second son of Conrad Hilton. He inherited the title to the family business when his older brother, Nicky, died several years ago. (A younger brother, Eric, is vice president of the Hilton Corporation.) Barron can usually be found at home with his eight children, his wife Marilyn and their four dogs and seven goldfish. The Hilton home is palatial. Designed in the Georgian style, it was built in the thirties and bought by Barron five years ago for $375,000. He spent $600,000 renovating the home and grounds, which cover 2½ acres. Barron travels often. Aside from being president of the corporation, he is also principal owner and vice president of the MacDonald Oil Co. in Dallas, Texas, and a partner in a California citrus company. "It's not easy being married to an empire builder," says Marilyn. "But before I was married, I got a lot of advice about rich guys being over-workers, so I was well-prepared."

QUOTE: Pitcher Tom Seaver was reared in a competitive family: "Competition was always a part of our family makeup because it was an athletic family—swimming, golf, tennis, volleyball, you name it. Anything with a ball, I played. I was an above-average student, but I didn't particularly care for school and didn't work very hard. I did as much as I had to to get by, which I'm sorry for now, but you can't appreciate that when you're that young. When I was thirteen, fourteen and fifteen, all I cared about was Henry Aaron's batting average, and knowing every day whether he went 1-for-4 or 3-for-4 was much more important to me than learning about the Civil War." From "Inside Corner: Talks With Tom Seaver," edited by Joel H. Cohen (Atheneum, $7.95). UNQUOTE.

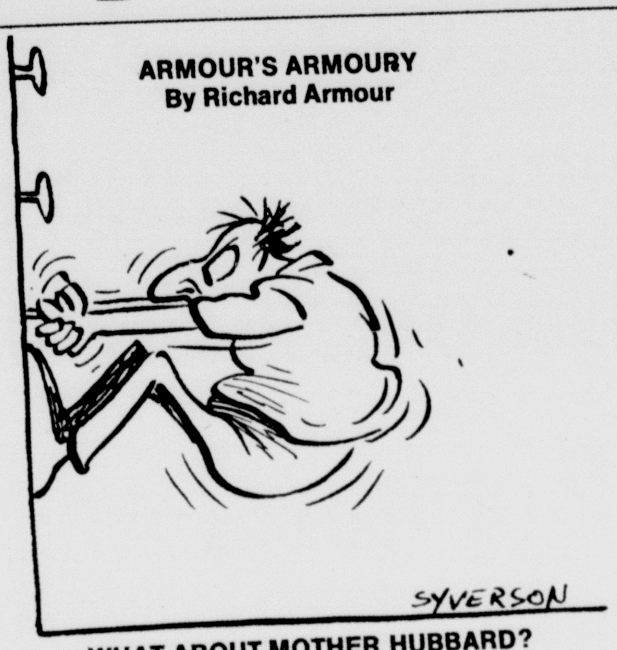
ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour



WHAT ABOUT MOTHER HUBBARD?

We've cupboard doors that open hard
And must be tugged and yanked.
Among our many nuisances
These very high are ranked.

We've also cupboard doors that will
Not close. They stay ajar.
Our banging on them doesn't help,
Or hasn't helped so far.

Oh yes, we've cupboard doors that close
And open, with authority.
I love such doors and so regret
That they're in the minority.

My neighbor's son was always watching planes take off and go up and get smaller and smaller until they were gone. He had never been on a plane when his mother decided to fly to Fresno and take him with her. Five or ten minutes after the plane had taken off, he said, "Mommy, when are we going to get smaller?"
